"Sunshine" Nurse on Trial as Poisoner

Mrs. Bessie May (Skeels) Lundgren, accused of Death of Andover Teacher

Mrs. Bessie May (Skeels) Lundgren, on trial after many postponements because of her critical illness.

MRS. LUNDGREN IN COURT, PROPPED UP BY PILLOWS

Essex County Courthouse, Lawrence, June 9.—Propped against white pillows, not one bit whiter than her own waxen face, Bessie May (Skeels) Lundgren was carried into the courtroom today to face trial for the alleged murder by poison of Miss Florence W. Gay, retired Abbott Academy school teacher of Andover.

Attorney Daley, for Mrs. Lundgren, said she would tell her own story on the witness stand.

Deputy Sheriff Bishop and Clarence I. Williams, a taxi driver, carried the frail little figure through the aisle, into the chair, where her pillows were arranged for her by her husband, Alfred J. Lundgren. A woman attendant, Mrs. Margaret Hooper, sat near her, watching every move that her patient made.

Mrs. Lundgren sat just outside the rail of the bar enclosure, beside her counsel, Daniel J. Daley of Boston. She wore the single black gown, with white satin collars and cuffs that she has worn at her former appearances in court. A plain black hat, with a drooping veil, was removed as soon as Mrs. Lundgren was comfortably seated.

NEW JERSEY OFFICIALS PRESENT

Attorney-General Henry C. Attwill was the first attorney to arrive. He was followed a few minutes later by District Attorney Henry G. Wells of Essex County. Attorney Daley joined his client shortly after he appeared in the courtroom and conferred with her and her husband during a wait for Judge Webster Thayer.

Officials of the State of New Jersey, with police officials also from that state, have arrived and will remain throughout the trial.

The frail prisoner, too weak even to attend mass, is under two indictments for murder. The second one is of interest to New Jersey. Charged

Record Low Price for Mackerel as Fleet Comes In

This was the biggest day of the season at the fishing piers, ten vessels arriving with 45,000 pounds of mackerel while sixteen vessels brought in 1,200,000 pounds of groundfish.

Mackerel sold at 1½ cents a pound, the lowest price that delectable fish in recent years. All the groundfish that could not be sold in Boston was taken to Provincetown to be sold at clearing prices.

Prices of groundfish ranged as follows: Haddock, 2 to 2½ cents a pound; cod, 1 cent; large cod, 1 cents; small cod, 2 cents; pollock, 2½ to 3 cents; hake, 1 cents.

These prices are exceptionally low. A good deal of groundfish was put in cold storage.

BORAH HAS COPY OF TEXT

Senate Action Taken in Spite of Message From Wilson Insisting on Secrecy

Washington, June 9.—The peace treaty will be published immediately as a Senate document, it was decided by a vote of 47 to 24 in the Senate this afternoon.

The publication of the peace treaty was proposed by Senator Borah of Idaho, who presented a copy, which he declared had been brought to this country by Frazier Hunt of the Chicago Tribune and which he declared he had been authorized by the Chicago Tribune to make public if he saw fit.

Beyond question the peace treaty is a matter of public record abroad," Senator Borah said. "It is being freely distributed in Germany, Denmark and Sweden, and there is no reason why it should not be presented here. I move that it be printed as a Senate document."

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska immediately opposed, and read into the Record a cablegram which he received from President Wilson, stating that those who held copies of the English text of the treaty held "that which they are not entitled to have or to communicate."

Despite the presentation of the President's statement, the Senate voted to adopt Senator Borah's motion.

VOTE ON SUBMISSION OF "L" CARMEN'S DEMANDS

Boston Elevated carmen are voting today in Fay Hall, Dover and Washington streets, on the question of referring their request for increase in wages and an eight-hour day to the National War Board. The balloting began at 8 a. m. and is scheduled to close at 10 p. m. Officials of the union expressed the opinion that the matter would be referred to the War Board for adjustment. A majority vote decides. If the radicals in the union prevail the local union will endeavor to settle the controversy without outside assistance.

Brand Whitlock to Be Ambassador to Italy

By International News Service.

Paris, June 9.—President Wilson has decided to appoint Brand Whitlock, now minister to Belgium, ambassador to Rome, succeeding Thomas Nelson Page. The promotion is in recognition of Whitlock's fine work at Brussels during the war.

Page is retiring to continue his literary work. It is known, however, that he has been out of touch with President Wilson's views on the Italian situation.

TEN-YEAR TERM FOR SLAYER OF LIEUT. EUROPE

Herbert Wright, formerly a trap drummer in the famous "Hell Fighters'" band, today in Superior Criminal Court pleaded guilty to manslaughter and was sentenced to not more than fifteen nor less than ten years in the State Prison.

Wright was indicted for murder in the first degree for stabbing to death Lieutenant James Reese Europe, leader of the band, at Mechanics Hall on the night of May 11. Alienists for the defense pronounced him insane, whereupon District Attorney Pelletier asked for a commission to examine the man. Judge Sanderson of the Superior Criminal Court appointed Dr. Charles F. Sullivan and Dr. John C. Rogers, who examined Wright on Saturday.

The commission today made the following report:

"We found no evidence to indicate that he is insane, but the examination did show him to be mentally deficient of a very low grade and to such an extent that we question his entire responsibility."

In view of this report the District Attorney stated he did not feel that the Commonwealth was justified in going on with a charge of murder in the first degree and said that a plea of guilty to manslaughter would be accepted.

NO MORE TROOPS NEEDED ON BORDER, GENERAL SAYS

Washington, June 8.—The situation on the Mexican border does not call for additional American troops there, Brigadier-General Cabell, commanding the Southern Department, today telegraphed Adjutant-General Harris. General Cabell's telegram was in response to a request by the adjutant-general that he investigate the border situation following the receipt of a message from Governor Hobby of Texas stating that an emergency might arise at any minute and asking that two cavalry battalions of the Texas National Guard be inducted into the Federal service.

DENOUNCE POSTAL HEAD

"Prussianized Methods" Are Condemned by A. F. of L.; Covenant Approved

Atlantic City, N. J., June 9.—Organized labor's demand for the dismissal of Postmaster-General Burleson was voiced at the opening session today of the 39th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Matthew Woll, president of the International Labor Press of America and a member of the War Labor Board, was loudly applauded when he asked Burleson's dismissal for his "Prussianized methods of dealing with postal employes."

He charged that Burleson's object was to show a profit on the books of the postoffice department. He asked the Federation of Labor to petition Congress for the repeal of the zone system, calling for increased postal rates, on the ground that it "is un-American."

MAY ASK REMOVAL.

It is considered likely that the convention will ask President Wilson to remove Burleson.

Endorsement of the covenant of the League of Nations and demand for government ownership or regulation of all public and quasi-public utilities, were contained in the report of the executive council, submitted to the convention by Secretary Frank Morrison. The recommendations embraced within the report will form the basis of resolutions to be urged for adoption at later sessions. Other recommendations were:

Development of the American merchant marine under government control with the rights of seamen safeguarded.

Government ownership of wharfs and docks used for commerce or

MELANSON RELEASED IN AUTO DEATH CASE

George I. Melanson, wealthy shoe manufacturer of Lynn, was exonerated of the charge of manslaughter in Lynn Court today. He was charged with the death of seven-year-old Aileen Connolly of Swampscott, running her down in his auto as she attempted to cross the street. Chief of Police Hugh S. Corson of Swampscott, who testified, said Mr. Melanson was blameless. Judge Lummus dismissed the case. Melanson surrendered immediately after the accident and was released on bail.

U. S. SHIPS READY TO PROTECT NICARAGUA

Washington, June 9.—America will see to it that Nicaragua is not invaded. This was made plain by State Department officials today, following the receipt from the Nicaraguan legation of an appeal to the United States for material protection against an anticipated invasion from Costa Rica. There are American battleships in all Nicaraguan ports at present, it was learned. These put in before there was any evidence of decidedly strained relations between that country and Costa Rica.

BRAE-BURN SCORING IS HIGH

Otto Hackbarth Low Man Among the Early Finishers in Title Field

Brae-Burn, June 9.—A large gallery was on hand this morning when the first pair started in the national open golf championship at the Brae-Burn Country Club. The first scores were high.

The rain slowed up the play of some starters, but for the old-timers the conditions are perfect.

Ray Gorton of Brae-Burn and Jack Park of Maidstone were the first to finish their ground. Gorton was around in 88, while Park was 91.

George Frothingham, Glen Cove, took a 38 for his first nine, but two 6's on his home journey spoiled his chances to break 80.

At the 14th and 15th holes he scored a 6.

His card

Out ..... 4 4 4 4 5 3 5 4 5—38
In ..... 5 5 5 3 6 6 5 3 5—47—85

Jack Gordon, Buffalo, also had an 81 for his round. He was out in 38, with a two at the sixth hole, when his iron shot left him a short putt. At the tenth a 7 was scored, while at the eleventh a 6 was registered.

His card

Out ..... 5 4 5 5 7 2 4 3 3—38
In ..... 7 6 4 3 5 4 5 4 5—43—81

Abelard Lapinora and Jack Black, the two Californians, did not show as well as was expected of them, as both are off their game in spots. This is due to the fact that both are suffering from ptomaine poisoning.

COAST STARS NOT IN STRIDE.

Espinosa had an 81, going out in 42 and the same figure for his return journey. His iron was working finely, he having rimmed eight different putts of thirty-foot length. His driving, however, was not up to his usual standard.

Black was out in 41 and home in 39. Outside of two poorly played holes, his showing was good. At the fifth hole he lost his ball after playing his second shot, and a seven was registered.

A poorly played approach shot to the fifteenth, which landed in the bunker, cost him another seven. He required two more shots after being trapped at the home holes and took three puts.

His card:

Out ..... 5 4 5 5 7 3 4 3 5—41
In ..... 5 5 4 3 5 7 4 3 4—39—80

Otto Hackbarth of Cincinnati was around in 77, the best score up to date. He was even fours for his first nine, with a six at the fourth, but made up for this mistake by taking a four at the long fifth.

Coming home, Hackbarth took a six at the tenth, a three at the thirteenth and finished up with a five.

His card:

Out ..... 4 3 4 6 4 3 4 4 6—38
In ..... 6 5 5 3 5 4 4 5 6—41—77

Harry Hampton of the Virginia C. C. took 79 for his round after reaching the turn in 39 with a two at the eighth, where he placed his iron shot five feet off the cup. He was home in 40.

The card:

Out ..... 5 5 5 4 7 3 4 5 3—39
In ..... 5 5 4 3 6 5 4 6 5—40—79

AUTOIST GETS YEAR IN JAIL FOR SPEEDING

Harry Orr, whose automobile killed one man and injured another in West Newton on May 4, was given a year in the House of Correction today in Newton Court for speeding, held in $2,500 on a charge of manslaughter and fined $20 for using the machine without the owner's consent.

Orr appealed from the jail sentence and was held in $1,000 bonds. He also appealed from the fine and was held in $100 bonds. The sentence was one of the most severe ever dealt out in Newton Court for culpability in a fatal automobile accident.

Operating a machine owned by Morris Temple of this city, it is charged that Orr on May 4 ran his car into and killed Frederick Donahue and injured a companion riding in Temple's car. Orr's home is at No. 171 Cherry street, West Newton.

Cold Closes Schools; Some of the Boys Go Swimming

Worcester, June 9.—Two Worcester public schools were closed today because of the cold. This is the first time in the history of the public schools that this has happened in a summer month. The temperature was 58 degrees.

After being dismissed some of the pupils went swimming. The dismissal was made necessary because of a school regulation providing that the temperature in the rooms must be 60 degrees and the steam furnaces had been taken apart.

MUNICH STRIKE PROTEST AGAINST LEVINE DEATH

Amsterdam, June 9.—Following the labor disturbances in Berlin protest against the execution of the Bavarian communist leader, Levine, a twenty-four-hour strike has been proclaimed at Munich, it was reported from there today. Martial law has been proclaimed at Remscheid, in Rhenish Prussia.

HOUSE COMMITTEE VOTES RAILROADS $750,000,000

Washington, June 9.—A deficiency appropriation of $750,000,000 for the Railroad Administration, a cut of $450,000,000 from the $1,200,000,000 asked for by Director-General Hines, was recommended today to the House by the House Appropriations Committee.

MRS. LUNDGREN, FRAIL AND WEAK, CARRIED INTO COURT FOR TRIAL

ACCUSED NURSE PROPPED IN CHAIR BY PILLOWS

with having caused the death, by arsenical poisoning, of Miss Florence W. Gay of Andover, Mrs. Lundgren is also charged with the murder of her brother, Alfred Wilkins, in New Jersey.

Weighing under ninety pounds, Mrs. Lundgren presented a most pathetic figure as she sat in the courtroom, her head supported by a hand that was almost transparent.

NURSE'S DOCTOR CALLED.

When Judge Thayer arrived in court, he sent at once for Attorney-General Attwill and Attorney Daley, to be assured that Mrs. Lundgren was in condition to be tried. Attorney Daley assured him that in the opinion of her counsel this trial is the only thing that will save his client's life.

Dr. William D. Walker of Andover, Mrs. Lundgren's physician, and the man in whose care she now is, with Dr. William J. Sullivan, city physician, examined Mrs. Lundgren and conferred with her attorneys, according to the order of the court. No serious symptoms were discovered by either physician that would interfere with the progress of the trial.

Judge Thayer entered the court at 11.35, and as soon as he was seated Attorney-General Attwill addressed the court stating that although he had been assured that Mrs. Lundgren's physical condition was such as to make assignment for trial safe, the manner in which Mrs. Lundgren entered the court this morning, and especially her appearance in the prisoner's dock, gave him grave misgivings as to her condition.

READY FOR ORDEAL.

Attorney-General Attwill said that the date of the trial was assigned more because of the pleas of the defence than the plea of the state.

Judge Thayer said that if it was true that the prisoner at the bar was brought to court in an ambulance and entered the court on a stretcher he should refuse to try her unless assured by her own physician that she could stand trial with a rigorous cross-examination. The judge said that he should advise a postponement or at least a continuance of the trial.

Mr. Attwill, Attorney Daley and Mrs. Lundgren herself if she was able to stand trial before continuing.

Attorney Daley, replying, reviewed the history of the case, and said that it was Mrs. Lundgren's greatest wish to go on, and promised that she would not faint or collapse. Both Dr. Walker and Dr. Sullivan agreed, according to Attorney Daley, that Mrs. Lundgren could stand trial. He said Attorney-General Attwill addressed that the questions were such that he could not answer them fully and to partially decide on the case.

Charles L. Keeney of Lynn, a juror, was called. Keeney was not challenged and at 1 o'clock was sworn as juror number two.

How the Accused Nurse Looked in Court

Mrs. Lundgren sat just outside the rail of the bar enclosure, beside her counsel, Daniel J. Daley of Boston. She wore the simple black gown, with white satin collars and cuffs that she has worn at her former appearances in court. A plain black hat, with a drooping veil, was removed as soon as Mrs. Lundgren was comfortably seated. She was very pale and sat propped up by pillows.

BANKRUPT, AUSTRIA MAY ASK BRITISH AID

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service from the London Daily Express.

Vienna, via London, June 9.—Austria may decide herself bankrupt and place herself under the sole financial control of England, according to a well authenticated report in circulation here today. Dr. Schulpeter, minister of finance, has left for St. Germain in council with Professor Lammasch of the Austrial peace delegation, and it is expected that the conference will be followed by efforts to make England financial guardian for this country.

FIRE AT YOUTH CHARGED WITH STEALING AUTO

After a running fight in which the police fired six shots, Leslie England, nineteen, was arrested near his home in Dorchester on a warrant charging the larceny of a $2,900 automobile. In court today he was held in $3,000 bonds for hearing Thursday. England is charged with stealing a machine owned by Daniel C. Merritt of Newbury street on Saturday. He was captured by Inspectors Haggerty, Durrey and Donovan. The car was recovered.

AUSTRIA'S TERMS WILL BE READY ON TIME

Paris, June 9.—Counter peace proposals will be handed to Premier Clemenceau by Dr. Renner, head of the Austrian peace delegation at Versailles, within the allotted fortnight, said Dr. Renner, who has just returned to St. Germain. He added that he had conferred with all the principal representatives of the Austrian republic and that "all were profoundly downcast by the treaty, which simply destroys Austria."

ALLEGED BILL BOOSTER IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Charged with raising a $1 bill to $10, Angelo Montone of Prince street, North End, was held for the Grand Jury today by United States Commissioner Hayes. He furnished bail, increased from $500 to $1,000. Montone failed to produce a man named "Mike" who, he declared at a previous hearing, gave him a raised bill.

O'CONNOR DENIES SINN FEIN IS CREATION OF IRELAND

London, June 9.—"Ireland is more united against than sinning," declared T. P. O'Connor, M. P., in a speech at Leeds, said a Central News dispatch from that city today. "The Sinn Fein is not the creation of Ireland, nor do the Sinn Fein leaders have one-half as much perfidy as the successive British administrations."

GENERAL STRIKE IN ITALY THREATENED

Rome, June 9.—Labor representatives in the Chamber of Deputies declared today they would order a general strike on Thursday unless the present sporadic strikes were settled.

transportation and the linking up of navigable rivers.

Government or State ownership of waterpower.

The right of women to receive the same pay as men for equal work should be recognized.

NO WAGE REDUCTION.

There must be no reduction in the wage of any worker, but in many cases wages must rise to meet the rising cost of living.

A graded tax on all usable land above the acreage cultivation.

More definite legislation to correct corporation abuses.

Immigration into the United States should be prohibited for at least two years after peace is signed, and at no time should an influx of foreigners be permitted when an abnormal degree of unemployment exists.

The inauguration by the government of a plan for building model homes and establishing a system of credits whereby workingmen may borrow money at low interest to build their own homes.

Continuance of the effort to obtain a general eight-hour work day.

ENDORSES COVENANT.

"The treaty of peace as drafted by the allied and associated governments," declared the report, "sets a new standard in the relations of nation to nation and gives to the government a purpose lacking wherever the monarchic and bureaucratic concept has prevailed. We feel that with a peace so built the world has in truth been made safe for democracy.

"The covenant of the League of Nations must meet with the unqualified approval and support of the American working people. It is not a perfect document and perfection is not claimed for it. It does, however, make the nearest approach to perfection that ever has been reached in the international affairs of mankind."

The report reviews the history of the United States constitution and expresses the opinion that the covenant of the League of Nations will be amended from time to time to meet its defects.

PROBE OF 'LEAK' IS BEGUN AT CAPITAL

Message From Wilson Says Nobody Is Entitled to Copy of Treaty Text

ton today cabled Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, author of the resolution calling for a probe of charges that copies of the treaty were in the hands of certain New York interests.

The cablegram, expressing hope that the investigation would be "most thoroughly prosecuted," and at the President's belief that "it would be unwise to submit a document still in the course of negotiation," was submitted by Senator Hitchcock to the Foreign Relations committee today, when the probe was started.

Immediately after the President's telegram had been read into the record, the committee announced that six of the leading financiers of the country were to be subpoenaed. They are: J. Pierpont Morgan, Frank A. Vanderlip, Jacob H. Schiff, Thomas F. Lamont, H. C. Davison and Paul Warburg.

THE PRESIDENT'S CABLE.

The text of the President's cablegram follows:

"I am heartily glad that you have demanded an investigation with regard to the possession of text in full of the treaty by unauthorized persons. I have felt that it was highly undesirable officially to communicate the text of a document which is still in negotiation and subject to change.

Any one who has possession of the official English text has what to is clearly not entitled to have or to communicate. I have felt in honor bound to act in the same spirit and in the same way as the representatives of the other great powers in this matter, and am confident that my fellow countrymen will not expect me to break faith with them. I hope the investigation will be most thoroughly prosecuted.

"WOODROW WILSON."

Open doors for the investigation came as a surprise, as it had been planned to have merely a meeting for organization today.

Senator Hitchcock introduced as the first bit of testimony the President's message, after Senator Fall, of New Mexico, had made a motion that the acting secretary of state be summoned as the first witness.

BORAH IS A WITNESS.

Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi insisted that the President's message be read, after which the Fall motion was adopted.

Senator Borah was placed upon the witness stand and told of his hearing that the peace treaty was in the possession of such men as Jacob H. Schiff, Thomas F. Lamont, H. P. Davidson, Paul Warburg and J. P. Morgan. Senator Borah stated that he did not feel that he could disclose the source of his information because it "would be breach of faith," and, further, "because it would perhaps stop what I believe is the real duty of this investigation, to determine the connection between these gentlemen and the treaty."

Senator Hitchcock moved that the men named by Senator Borah be subpoenaed at the convenience of the committee. Senator Williams of Mississippi moved that the name of Frank A. Vanderlip be added, and both motions were adopted.

Secretary Polk, appearing before the committee, testified that there were thirty-five copies of the treaty in his possession, but that they were all under seal and that there was no possible chance of the treaty having leaked from his office.

During Senator Borah's testimony, Senator Knox of Pennsylvania suggested that Thomas F. Lamont might have come into possession of the treaty in connection with his duties as financial adviser to the peace commission.

"A SERIOUS CHARGE."

"That may be the avenue to investigate," Senator Borah stated.

Senator Hitchcock expressed a belief that the committee should not make public any copy of the treaty which came into its possession during the investigation, and it was agreed action on that matter be taken later. Senator Brandegee, addressing the committee, stated that Senator Hitchcock had charged that those in possession of the treaty had secured it by bribery.

"That is a serious charge and I hope that the Senator from Nebraska will make good on it or withdraw the charge." Senator Brandegee said.

Senator Lodge testified that while in New York last Monday he had met a friend who had showed him a copy of the treaty and subsequently another friend had told him that he had a copy of it.

"I was told there were four copies in possession of persons my friends know," Senator Lodge said. "I have made no charges that the treaty was in the hands of financial interests, and my friends who told me that had the treaty were connected in no way with any business interests."

Senator Hitchcock asked Senator Lodge to inquire of his friends whether they would object to having their names made public and the Senator from Massachusetts said that he would do so.

When Secretary Polk took the stand he said he had received one copy of the treaty by special courier on May 19, later ten more copies by courier, and still later more copies in a pouch.

"All of the copies are in my safe and have been seen by no one but myself and my assistant, Mr. Shaw," he said. "They have not been out of my office. I had directions from the peace commission to hold these copies of the treaty awaiting orders."

Germany May Be Made Member of League of Nations in October

By JOHN EDWARD NEVIN,
Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, June 9.—The Big Four today are finishing touches upon the ultimatum which will accompany the entente's reply to the German counter-proposals this week. Four material modifications in the treaty have been virtually settled. They are:

1—Germany is guaranteed coal from Upper Silesia and Polish territory.

2—Germany will be furnished with complete records of the League of Nations, and if she lives up to the treaty terms she may actually be admitted to the league at the forthcoming meeting in Washington in October.

3—Military arrangements are modified whereby the army may be abolished if the leaders desire it.

4—Germany is given representation on the economic commission, but this commission will receive executive orders to fix definitely the size and payment terms of indemnity not later than October.

U. S. Treasury Lifts the Embargo on Gold

By International News Service.

Washington, June 9.—Removal of the gold embargo was announced by Secretary of the Treasury Glass this afternoon. Shipments of gold out of the country will be governed by practically the same procedure as that applying to silver. Applications will be "freely granted," it was stated, except to Germany and those sections of Russia under Bolshevik control.

BOSTON GREETS 7,500 SOLDIERS RETURNED ON TWO TRANSPORTS

WOMAN IN UNIFORM OF FRANCE

Mrs. John Corbin, Decorated for Service Abroad, Among the Throng at Base

With a total of 400 officers and 7,488 returning men, besides four women and twenty-nine civilians, the United States transport President Grant and the Leland Liner Winifredian arrived shortly before noon today and docked at the United States Army Supply Base at South Boston.

The President Grant brought over 230 officers and 5,305 men and four women. On the Winifredian were 170 officers, 2,183 men and 25 civilians.

The Winifredian, which was the first to arrive, was accorded a noisy welcome, as was the President Grant, which followed shortly after.

Both ships docked at the same side of the pier, where are already moored four large steamships, a destroyer, twenty submarine chasers, besides besides eight French mine sweepers and two scows. The spectacle of so many ships docked at the same pier is considered very unusual, and caused considerable comment. It is said to be the only docking place in America where so large a number of ships are docked at the present time.

TRAINED AT CAMP DEVENS.

Today's troops on the President Grant were the 2[illegible] Regiment Engineers, and the 18[illegible] of the 804th Engineers, t[illegible] which comprises the New E[illegible]aft unit which trained at C[illegible]evens, originally in command [illegible]ptain W. I. Ridley.

The four women who arrived today were New Yorkers. Among them was Mrs. John Corbin, wife of a prominent newspaper man, who has been with the French medical service for the past two years. Mrs. Corbin returned in a French uniform, wearing the French recognition medal for distinguished service. Another of the woman arrivals was Mrs. William Brewster, wife of a United States consular officer in Egypt.

Other arrivals were Captain William B. Moore of the famous Sixth Marines, who wears the D. S. Cross and also the French Croix de Guerre. Captain Moore is a famous amateur athlete. He was the captain of the Princeton track team in 1916-17. In the former year he won the 100-yard dash, and in the latter year the 220-yard dash in the intercollegiate meet. Today he modestly refused to tell for what he had received the much-coveted war decorations, other than to say that it was for gallantry. Others of his mates stated, however, that he had been awarded the decorations for taking ammunition in the battle lines, and bringing out the wounded at great risk to himself.

BOSTON PHYSICIAN RETURNS.

On the Winifredian the troops were the 22d Regiment Engineers, companies, and several casualty companies.

Among the officers aboard was Lieutenant-Colonel Timothy Gouldling, a well-known Boston physician, who was in the medical service in France. Augustus [illegible] of No. 81 Mounts Vernon [illegible] John H. Stevens, of Lee, and [illegible] V. Morgan, of Chelsea, were among the eight returning Y. M. C. A. workers.

Major N. A. Middleton, of Concord, Mass., was in command of the third battalion of the 22d Engineers.

NEW ENGLAND RAISES $895,174 FOR FRANCE

"We need more railways, more railway cars, more man power and long easy credit, and if they don't come at once France is doomed," declares Mrs. A. M. Dike, director of the American Committee for Devastated France. This report received at the New England headquarters.

"Many refugee families are remaining in cities in the interior of France because they receive a pension." the report continues. "While it costs twice as much to build a home as before the war, the government is allowing only 50 per cent. toward the expense," Mrs. Dike states. The total raised by the New England committee is $895,174.

JURY DISAGREES IN LAWRENCE WILL CASE

A disagreement was reported today by Norfolk County Superior Court jury in the contest over the will of the late John R. Lawrence of Milton. His adopted daughter, Mrs. Mary L. Campbell of Birmingham, Ala., sought to break the will, claiming undue influence on the part of the widow and mental mind of the testator. The jury went out Friday morning and deliberated after five hours. Mrs. Campbell also charged that Lawrence transferred $50,000 in mortgages and bonds to his wife. When the will was allowed originally it showed an estate of $8,500.

Hawaii May Wear 'Em Higher, But Hub Girls Won't

Boston women are going to wear 'em longer and narrower despite the edict of the Chicago dress-making convention that skirts are to be shorter and fuller.

At Chicago it was declared that skirts were to be seven inches from the ground and much fuller in an effort to get away from the clinging styles. But Boston dressmakers are seemingly paying no attention to the edict. Their designs for the Fall are all along the narrow and silhouetty lines.

One concession, however, is made by the local dressmakers and this is in sport skirts. The fair maids of Boston will be seen wearing 'em six inches from the ground with a liberal amount of fullness for comfort.

Very narrow skirts and only three inches from the ground is to be the standard skirt style for the coming season. Evening gowns, street gowns and afternoon gowns are to all be very long and narrow.

NAVY OFFERS TABLETS MADE FROM "MAINE"

Congressman George Holden Tinkham announces that the Navy Department has adopted a plan whereby 1,211 memorial tablets made from the wreck of the old battleship Maine will be disposed of to municipalities, military or naval associations or societies and former officers and crew of the Maine or their heirs or representatives.

The estimated cost of the tablets is about $5 plus the freight or express charges from Washington to destination, which amount will be credited to the cost of the removal of the wreck of the vessel. Applicants are urged to write the Secretary of the Navy.

BRITAIN AIRSHIP TO CARRY 30 ON SEA FLIGHT

U. S. Naval Officer to Accompany Craft to Atlantic City

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

London, June 9.—From the Admiralty and the air ministry today Universal Service gleaned the following data concerning the monster dirigible R-34 and its contemplated trip across the Atlantic.

The R-34 is not yet ready to sail and it is not decided whether the jump off will be from its present shed at East Fortune or from the shrinkable grounds at Land's End.

The great airship will carry 2,000 gallons of petrol more than sufficient for a four-days' flight.

The crew will consist of between twenty-five and thirty men, including General Maitland of the Air Ministry, but there will be no passengers.

The flight will carry the R-34 almost to Greenland from 400 to 1,000 miles off the direct course, touching the North American continent about the Hudson straits, Labrador, possibly Cape Breton and thence directly to Atlantic City.

An American naval officer who has not yet been selected will be among the airships crew. Another will be picked up at Atlantic City for the return voyage. This is in the nature of international courtesy.

Universal Service is authorized to say that the R-34 will absolutely not make any landing in the United States except at Atlantic City, because the air authorities are unwilling to risk a descent of the monster craft except at this most favorable location. Even that is extremely risky because there is no shed there sufficiently large enough to accommodate the R-34.

If the wind is excessively strong when the R-34 arrives it will be a difficult problem because even in the most favorable circumstances it is hard to handle the monster craft. It will remain for the commander in that case to determine whether to go on the Azores without landing at Atlantic City.

JAIL TERMS FOR AUTO THEFT IN CAMBRIDGE

Appropriating other people's autos for joy rides as an outdoor sport received a setback in Cambridge court today when four members of this sort of mischief were sentenced to thirty days each in jail. All appealed. The men were: Joseph Cupholdine, Cottage street, Cambridge; John H. Smith, Holland street, West Somerville; Joseph L. Fitzpatrick, Linwood street, Providence, and Charles G. Williams, a sailor from Missouri.

The men, according to the police, with two others not captured, stole the automobile of Fred W. Brown of No. 69 Highland street, Roxbury, when it was left unlocked in Cambridge. They were pursued by police and finally abandoned the car at the West Somerville line.

LINER BREAKS RECORD FROM HALIFAX TO N. Y.

New York, June 9.—The Mauretania of the Cunard Line clipped an hour off her record for the run to New York, via Halifax, making the trip from Halifax to Sandy Hook after twenty-three hours' steaming from the Canadian port. This is about thirteen hours better than any other steamship ever made the trip in and exactly seven hours better than the best time by rail between Halifax and New York.

DR. WILKINS IS FACING JURY AT MINEOLA

Alleged Wife-Slayer on Trial Where Two Famous Cases Were Heard

By International News Service.

Mineola, L. I., June 9.—Dr. Hamilton Wilkins, a prominent New York physician, charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Florence Cannon Wilkins, on the night of Jan. 5, 1918, at their home in Great Neck, Long Island, went on trial today in the same courthouse where Harry K. Thaw was tried for the murder of Stanford White, and where Mrs. Florence Conklin was tried for the murder of her husband, Jack Donahue, a vaudeville star.

Dr. Wilkins, a well known Westchester physician, was placed on trial today, charged with slaying his third wife since he left their long Beach home on February 1, 1918.

Despite a downpour of rain and the fact that today's session was held entirely by the drawing of a jury, a big crowd of morbid fans gathered early and packed the court room.

Mrs. Wilkins was beaten to death shortly after she and her husband returned from New York at midnight to look at night. There was no eyewitness to the tragedy. The doctor declared that both were set upon by a [illegible] that they entered the house. He himself was beaten and left for dead, he said, and he later found Mrs. Wilkins dead in the garden from blows with a hammer and a piece of lead pipe. District Attorney Charles H. Weeks, who assisted at the prosecution of Harry K. Thaw in his first trial, [illegible] the case against Mrs. Donaghue, will attempt to prove that the wife-slayer killed his wife in order to get $150,000 worth of property she owned.

HOLD DRIVER FOR "L" MAN'S DEATH BY AUTO

Joseph Falsone, forty-five, single, of No. 13 Indiana street, South End, died at City Hospital of injuries received when struck by an automobile while at work on Massachusetts avenue near Clapp street, Dorchester. He was employed by the Boston Elevated Railway Company as a laborer.

According to the police the machine is the property of Frederick J. Buckley of No. 1 Williamson avenue, Dorchester, and was being driven by his son, Walter S. Rockwell, nineteen years old. Young Rockwell is under arrest, charged with manslaughter.

YACHTING PARTY RESCUED NEAR BREAKERS

Three Women and Boy Among Those Who Spent Anxious Hours on Helpless Boat in Gale

Sandwich, June 9.—Members of a yachting party aboard the cabin cruiser Eleanor E. Jr., who were rescued from the sea off[illegible] yesterday afternoon after an eight-hour search and struggle, Mr. Walter Bowers, who had planned the outing, [illegible] Mrs. Bowers departed for their home in Wollaston and Brighton today.

The yacht which [illegible] when taken off the rescuers was drifting in from Cape Cod Bay toward the Hyannis shore, included [illegible] women and a small boy. They were guests of C. E. Flagg of Brighton, owner of the boat, and included [illegible] from New York and Boston. Mrs. Ferguson and two women friends of Wollaston and Captain Perry and his thirteen-year-old son of Brighton.

Mr. Charles E. Jr., left Wollaston late yesterday for West Falmouth, the Ferguson's summer home. At 6 o'clock the engine stalled when the boat was seven miles from the entrance to Cape Cod Canal, between Plymouth and Sandwich.

When it became apparent that the engine was not going the coast would grow in intensity as the night wore on, Captain Perry and Mr. Ferguson put on the small boat over the side and started for the shore, in the face of a strong head wind.

It was after 7 when they arrived, and immediately the tug collector's launch was sent out into the gale, only to be driven back after a two-hour battle.

The Philadelphia & Reading tug Sydney, Captain Broderick, then put to sea, and searched until after midnight, but the lack of powerful searchlights, for the drifting cruiser, forced the tug to port. It was finally located two miles from the point where she had been anchored, and only five yards from the breakers and the big rollers on Ellisville shore.

A line was thrown aboard from the tug and a hawser was drawn to the yacht, and the pleasure boat was towed to the pier in Sandwich.

IRELAND'S LONG STRUGGLE IN PARLIAMENT TOLD BY CREEL

PARNELL'S METEORIC RISE GRAPHICALLY PICTURED

The Irish Question

By GEORGE CREEL

Former Chief of the United States Bureau of Public Information.

(In Part I Mr. Creel pointed out why, in his opinion, the Irish question was an American matter as well as a British problem. He touched on Ireland's age-old struggle for freedom, the valor of Irishmen in all lands, the bond between the United States and Ireland, and he announced that the purpose of this series of articles was to furnish facts upon which might be based an honest answer to the question of whether the Irish contentions are just.)

PART II.

Copyright 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

From 1870 to 1916, Home Rule meant Ireland and Ireland meant Home Rule. The movement and the nation were one and rang through the world in a single great appeal. For the first time in seven centuries the Irish put armed force aside and submitted their demand for independence to the arbitral justice of an English Parliament.

Isaac Butt may be written down as the father of Home Rule. An Ulster man, the son of a Presbyterian, his sense of fair play made him place his brilliant legal talents at the service of those unhappy scores who were dragnetted after the Fenian uprising of '67. The infamy of the trials, the packed juries, the prejudice of the judges, all combined to change the conservatism of his youth, and he soon took rank as a leader in the fight for Irish freedom.

The futile rebellions of the past, however, no less than the legalistic bent, led Butt sharply away from force and he evolved the blueprint of evidence and argument.

The Fenians, as their help-lessness as well as their love and faith in Butt, gave him authority in the name of Ireland, and in 1870 he rose in the Parliament at Westminster and launched his campaign of appeal to the justice of England. He lived to see his optimism mocked and his hope destroyed. A scant score of Irish members came to listen to him in time, although at first they were.

PARNELL NOT SO GENTLE.

He lived also to see the coming of one who was not gentle, whose words were sledgehammers, whose tactics turned amused indifference into active attention.

Charles Stewart Parnell found Parliament a deliberative body and he made it a Bedlam. A man of ice and iron, hating England with a cold and deadly hatred, a genius in leadership, a master of obstruction, his repeated filibusters soon proved conclusively that until the Irish question was considered, England's legislative body could not hope to consider any other question intelligently or consecutively.

Obstruction in Westminster he constructed no less boldly in Ireland. He put himself wholeheartedly behind Davitt's and Logue's campaign, and seethed with revolt. It was Parnell's fertile mind that saw the possibilities of the boycott, from North to South he preached unity, resistance and courage, armed and unprincipled he could not check him, for from Kilmainham jail he dictated terms to his captors. Soon the unmanageable Irish party was witnessed by both parties, Liberal and Conservative, looking for the support of Parnell and his once despised following. The Tories, under Salisbury and Churchill, were more than slightly pacific, paving many helpful Irish laws, but while they debated as to complete surrender, Gladstone acted, pledging himself and his party to Home Rule. Out went the Tories at Parnell's behest, and in 1886 Gladstone introduced the first Home Rule bill.

CHAMBERLAIN DEFEATS BILL.

It was a fateful moment for the fortunes of Joseph Chamberlain, Gladstone's trusted lieutenant, whose hatred of Parnell was even greater than that Imperialism would carry him faster and farther than any more humble horse of justice. Chamberlain rose to test public opinion, went to the country at once, but the election was by a narrow margin, and the triumphant Tories lost little time in bitter reprisal.

A coercion bill scourged Ireland with wholesale arrests, and even as Parnell rallied his forces to the fight, letters were printed that seemed to connect him directly with the atrocious Phoenix Park murders. Forgery was proved quickly and the wretched Pigott committed suicide, but the blow was that coming that struck the strong man down. A captain O'Shea filed suit for divorce, naming Parnell as co-respondent, and the hue and cry of outraged moralists drove him from public life to die.

The scandal killed home rule as with a dagger thrust, and it was not until 1892 that Gladstone dared to introduce a second home rule bill. It swept through the House of Commons this time, but was promptly killed by the House of Lords. Salisbury blandly dismissing the Irish as "Hottentots," old, worn and bitterly disgusted, Gladstone retired to private life, not in a last prophetic speech to England that neither home rule nor any other bill embodying social justice could ever be passed until the veto power of the House of Lords had been destroyed.

VICTORY OF 1911.

Home rule straightway identified it-self with the whole English fight for power, and in 1911 the battle of years was won by the adoption of the Parliament Act, which provided that any bill passing in the House of Commons in three successive sessions would automatically receive the royal assent and become a law.

This meant that the people of England approved self-government for the Irish, for throughout this campaign Mr. Asquith stood unequivocally that one of the first uses of the Parliament Act would be to carry through a home rule bill. This pledge was redeemed on April 11, 1912, and home rule swept through the House of Commons in all its stages, only to be vetoed by the House of Lords.

"In no respect was it an alarming measure, for it did not even approximate the powers and scope of the Canadian form of government. It created an Irish Parliament, yes, but the Senate was to be nominated by the government, and the Crown reserved all questions connected with the army, the navy, foreign relations, coinage and the collection of taxes; no power over trade was granted, nor over the postoffice, nor over the constabulary and the Lord Lieutenant was vested with power of reverse or annul all legislation enacted by the Irish Parliament.

Little enough in all truth, yet even this flavor of freedom was an offense to the Tories. Again and again it was introduced and rejected, and again the House of Lords exercised its veto power.

THE ULSTER CRUSADE.

Admittedly unable to check this legislative process by peaceful means, the Tories of England had already turned to the exercises of rebellion. Claiming that Ulster, the northern province of Ireland, was solidly Protestant and loyal in devotion to the British Empire, the Tories insisted that Home Rule would subject the loyal minority to the rule of a "bigoted, militant Roman Catholic majority." Ulster, they declared, was a nation in terms of blood and battle, and Ulster Irish, but English for the most part, launched a revitalized crusade of sedition.

Sir Edward Carson, Sir Frederick Smith, Mr. Balfour, Bonar Law, Walter Long, Sir James Craig, James Campbell, Lord Charles and Lord Robert Cecil declared openly and repeatedly that Home Rule would be resisted by force, arms were brought into Ulster from Germany and there were those bold enough to assert that if the blow fell, German aid would be sought and welcomed. Here are specific quotations:

"In the event of this proposed Parliament being thrust upon us, we solemnly and mutually pledge ourselves not to recognize its authority. * * * I do not care two pence whether it is treason or not."—Sir Edward Carson.

"It is a fact which I do not think any one who knows anything about Ireland will deny, that these people in the northeast of Ireland, from old prejudices certainly more than from anything else, from the whole of their past history, would prefer, I believe, to accept the government of a foreign country, rather than submit to be governed by the gentlemen below the gangway."—Bonar Law, in House of Commons.

"There is a spirit spreading abroad which I can testify to from my personal knowledge that Germany and the German Emperor would be preferred to the rule of John Redmond, Patrick Ford, and the Molly Maguires."—Captain Craig, M. P., "Morning Post," January 9, 1911.

Who shall say that Mr. Asquith was not justified when he declared: "The reckless rhodomontade at Belfast in the early Summer, as developed and amplified in this Ulster campaign, furnishes for the future a complete grammar of Anarchy. * * * A more deadly blow—I say it with the utmost deliberation and with the fullest conviction—has never been dealt in our time by any body or responsible political party at the very foundations on which democratic government rests."

Nor did those men let their threatened rebellion stop at words. On September 24, 1913, a provisional government of Ulster was formed at Belfast with Sir Edward Carson as chairman; James Campbell, Lord Chambers, John Gordon and William Moore, provisional governors; General Sir George Richardson, commander-in-chief; Sir Frederick Smith and Sir James Craig, aides-de-camp, and Colonel Hackett Pain, chief of staff. Training camps were established in Ulster, and at a great dinner in London Carson was presented with a shining sword.

The Tory exiles of England offered their homes as hospitals for such Ulster patriots as should be wounded in the glorious work of rebellion, and their daughters volunteered as nurses. Mr. Balfour, Lord Curzon, Lord Robert Cecil and Bonar Law solemnly pledged the support of the Unionist party to the movement.

The year 1914 found both forces in battle array. Parliament opened January 20 with the third and last attempt to amend the Home Rule bill was rejected by a vote of 333 to 78. Ulster's answer was that Asquith had worked no change in the sentiment of the House. On March 20 England was startled by the publication of a "British Covenant" declaring that the passage of a Home Rule bill would furnish justification for any action that might be effective to prevent it from going into operation.

BOTH IN BATTLE ARRAY.

Among the many who signed this amazing document of defiance were Earl Roberts, the Duke of Portland, Viscounts Halifax and Milner, Lords Aldenham, Balfour of Burleigh, the Dean of Canterbury, and Rudyard Kipling.

In March the Unionists scored their first real victory. For some reason that has never been explained satisfactorily, Mr. Asquith weakened before the threat of war and announced "projected concessions" to Ulster in moving the second reading of the Home Rule bill. His plan proposed that any county in Ulster, including the boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry, might vote themselves out for a term of six years from the first meeting of the Irish legislature in Dublin. The counties excluded would come into the Home Rule scheme automatically at the end of the six years, unless the Imperial Parliament determined otherwise.

NORTH END MAN CUT, ALLEGED ASSAILANT HELD

At North Margin and Endicott streets early today Ignacio Bruno was cut on the cheek with a sharp instrument by Joseph Anzillone, it is alleged. The latter was arrested and later held in $2,000 for hearing Friday. Anzillone is forty-five. Both men live on Shute street. The police resisted by force, arms were brought and the stabbing followed an acquittment.

RYAN TO BARE ATROCITIES IN IRISH JAILS

Big Meeting Tomorrow Night; Cardinal and Judge Cohalan Also to Speak

British "atrocities" in Ireland, alleged evidence of which has been laid before President Wilson in Paris, will be described in detail for a Boston audience tomorrow night by Michael J. Ryan, one of the three Irish-American delegates seeking justice for the Irish from the Peace Conference.

Mr. Ryan, Judge Daniel F. Cohalan of New York and Cardinal O'Connell are to be the principal speakers at a mass meeting in Mechanics Building. Mr. Ryan personally toured Ireland with Frank P. Walsh and former Governor Dunne, who are still in France.

For years a "moderate" in matters of Irish policy, president of the conservative United Irish League and constitutionally opposed to the doctrine of "physical force," Mr. Ryan is today one of Sinn Fein's staunchest supporters. He is well known here.

On their tour of Ireland Mr. Ryan, Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne obtained information that the Anglo-Irish government has kept from even the Irish press.

Judge Cohalan, stormy petrel of the Friends of Irish Freedom movement, is also well known in Boston. Local Irish societies are taking a keen interest in seeing to it that the audience is worthy of the occasion.

WOMAN SHOOTS REBELS IN EGYPT FROM TRAIN

Potshots at Egyptian revolutionists were taken by Mrs. A. P. Bonney, who, with her husband, Dr. Bonney of Alexandria, has just arrived in this country to visit his mother, Mrs. Emma F. Bonney of No. 13 Merrymount avenue, Wollaston.

The revolution broke out when Mr. and Mrs. Bonney were on a train from Alexandria to Port Said. Australian troops quelled the passenger with rifle and ammunition. Both Dr. Bonney and his wife helped defend the passengers by shooting at the revolutionists and repulsed several attacks.

FRENCH FLIER MAKES NEW ALTITUDE RECORD

Paris, June 9.—A new world's altitude record has been established by Adjutant Casale, a French aviator, who ascended to a height of 31,168 feet.

DISSENSION IN CITY PLANNING COMMITTEE

Majority Recommends "Western Artery" From Exeter to Essex Streets; Two Object

Dissension among members of the mayor's committee recently appointed to consider plans for street improvements was revealed today when the mayor made public the committee's report, in which they favor, in principle, the City Planning Board's proposed "Western Artery," a wide thoroughfare from the Back Bay to the heart of the city.

Richard deB. Boardman of Beacon street and Charles W. Whiting, a state street consulting engineer, are the dissenting members. They do not agree with the plan adopted, the recommendations made, the opinions and estimates expressed, or the conclusions reached.

NEW ARTERY PLANNED.

After recommending to the mayor that the City Planning Board's plan be given deserving, careful and immediate study, the report states that the street commissioners have prepared plans, somewhat modified, calling for a street eighty feet wide running from the corner of Huntington avenue and Exeter street to the corner of Columbus avenue and Arlington street, and a street 100 feet wide from this junction to the corner of Harrison avenue and Essex street. They further state that by widening Chauncy street the proposed "artery" could be extended to Franklin street.

The object of the project is to eliminate the congestion from the so-called shopping district. The cost will amount to several million dollars.

LARGE QUICK START.

The committee admits that the undertaking is too large to be carried out as a whole at one time, but urges that as much as possible be done immediately before new buildings are erected along the proposed route. They urge that a new street be laid out as soon as possible from the corner of Tremont and Eliot streets to the corner of Huntington avenue and Exeter street. They point out that this could be most advantageously done by securing further authority from the present Legislature, but if a loan of $1,110,000 can be secured from the City Council within the debt limit legislative help would not be necessary.

Those members who signed the report were John J. O'Callaghan, chairman of the Boston Board of Street Commissioners; Edward T. Kelly, chairman of the Board of Assessors; Frederick H. Fay, engineer; Laurence Minot, realty man; John C. Kiley and J. Sumner Draper.

YOUTH WHO ESCAPED FROM COURT IS CAUGHT

Herbert Crowley, one of the five boys who escaped from Roxbury Courthouse May 21 while awaiting arraignment, was captured early today after a chase over five or six streets in the vicinity of Arlington square, South End. He said he was glad he was taken, as since his escape he had lived on crusts and slept in doorways. Crowley, whose home is on Asylum street, was taken to Station 15, where he is wanted for three alleged breaks, and also is wanted at Station 4 for three others. He will first be delivered up to the Roxbury court authorities.

CAMP AT NEWPORT FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Newport, R. I., June 9.—Society folk are arranging for a Summer camp for crippled children on the grounds of the Nancy Hazard estate. Among those interested and on the committee to further the plan are Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman, Mrs. William P. Buffum, Mrs. Charles D. Easton, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, Mrs. Bradford Norman, Mrs. Roderick Terry and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster. Miss Lily Barrett Knut, also working for the cause, has been assisted by Dr. Edward A. McCarthy of Fall River.

BUILD NOW, CIVIC DUTY, DECLARES W. H. GRAVES

Higher Paid Workmen Can Do Better Work, Says War Labor Board Examiner

"BUILD NOW! Build now as a safe investment as well as a civic duty!

"Seldom in the history of the building industry has there been an opportunity like the present when both the civic pride and the self-interest of the investor can be appealed to by the same argument.

This is the statement of W. H. Graves, former examiner of the National War Labor Board, who is now investigating widely present building conditions for Waldo Brothers, the largest dealers in building materials in New England.

The War Labor Board Examiner went on to explain that labor is the largest item in the cost of building materials and building construction. The principal advance in labor was, however, for common labor, he said. Union wage scales for skilled labor in the building industry have not gone up in proportion to the increased cost of living.

WAGE RAISE PERMANENT.

"In forty-one of the leading cities in the United States, union wage scales in the building trades have advanced less than 30 per cent. since 1914," he said, "and this advance is less than half the generally accepted figure for the advance in the cost of living during the same period.

"The gains of wage earners are permanent," Mr. Graves added. "One important fact stands out prominently among the changes brought about by the war—a permanent improvement in the standard of living of wage earners. Having assumed control over labor as well as over materials, credit and transportation, the government was obliged to standardize as far as possible the conditions of employment.

"The principle of a minimum living wage and sanitary working and living conditions was generally voiced in the decisions of the War Labor Board. The American standard of living was not in any sense created by the war, but the necessities of the war caused it to be generally accepted. A careful analysis of present labor costs and reasons therefor leads to the conclusion that the tendency of labor is upward rather than downward.

MATERIALS' COST NOT LESSEN.

"In regard to building materials, lower prices must be the result of decline in interest and profits or taxes, as well as labor. It is not, therefore, to be expected that the cost of building construction can fall materially since these costs are at present low in comparison with the prices of commodities generally. This is why we should build now!

"Another good reason for building NOW has not been sufficiently emphasized—the fact that higher wages, under better conditions, means competition for the job and greater efficiency on the part of the employer and the employe. Wage rates per hour may remain the same, but labor cost actually decreases where workers are given an incentive to increase production by better living conditions and better organization at the plant.

"In these ways production is increased along with increased wages, but when the building boom comes, and the law of supply and demand will be in full force, there will be a shortage of both labor and materials. This will operate to the disadvantage of the building investor, who is not now aware of the permanent nature of the new price level.

NO PROFIT IN DELAY.

"Speaking of the new price level, it is the opinion of experts that it will remain high for a considerable period or not fall at all. The people must be made to understand that they must pay for what they want. It is hard to make the people understand this—perhaps they are not tired of it often enough. But the fact is that prices are up and they will remain up, and for that reason those who want to build should BUILD NOW. It will not profit a man to wait.

"I cannot do better than quote Professor Fisher of Yale, the leading authority on economic questions for the United States Department of Labor. Professor Fisher thus sums up the question of the new price level:

"'The fundamental practical question confronting business men is whether the general level of prices is going to fall. In my opinion it is not going to fall much, if at all. We are on a permanently higher price level, our currency is not inflated at the present time relative to the new level of prices in the world which the war has brought about. The country's volume of money will have to be judged in terms of this new price level, not in terms of the price level of the past.'"

BOOM COMING SOON.

Mr. Graves said that records of the Boston Building Department give a gratifying indication that building will soon be started here on a large scale. Records show that in Boston in May last year only sixty-six permits, involving $523,152 were issued. This year, however, 123 permits were granted in May for operations aggregating expenditures of $1,625,396.

Building of garages, Mr. Graves said, has greatly accelerated building and added that the auto men were at least one branch of business men who realized that to "build now means patriotic profiteering." There will be a tremendous auto business this year, he said, and it is quite apparent that the wise business man knows that he will lose considerable by waiting for prices to fall. His immediate profits from his new building will be greater than any possible loss he could sustain by any possible depreciation.

Jack London's Last Novel

HEARTS OF THREE

Never Before Published

A Thrilling Serial of Hidden Treasure, Love and Adventure

By JACK LONDON

Author of "The Call of the Wild," "The Valley of the Moon," "The Sea Wolf," "The Iron Heel," "White Fang" and Other Famous Novels

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard.

SUCH was the speed of the wretched creature's flight, spurred on by the pain of his lacerations and the fear of the overseer, that, plunging wildly on, he overtook the Solano party and plunged out of the jungle and into them as they were crossing a shallow stream, and fell upon his knees, whimpering for mercy.

He whimpered because of his betrayal of them. But this they did not know, and Francis, seeing his pitiable condition, lingered behind long enough to unscrew the metal top from a pocket flask and revive him with a drink of half the contents. Then Francis hastened on, leaving the poor devil muttering inarticulate thanks ere he dived off into the sheltering jungle in a different direction. But, underfed, overworked, his body gave way, and he sank down in collapse in the green cover.

Next, Alvarez Torres in the lead and tracking like a hound, the gendarmes at his back, the Jefe panting in the rear from shortness of breath, the pursuit arrived at the stream. The footmarks of the peon, still wet on the dry stones beyond the margin of the stream, caught Torres' eye.

In a trice, by what little was left of his garment, the peon was dragged out. On this kneeling portion of his anatomy he was destined to occupy much this day, he begged for mercy and received his interrogation. And, in the skilled knowledge of the Solano party, He who had betrayed and had been beaten, but who had yet yearned only succor from those he had betrayed, felt stir in him some atom of gratitude and good.

He denied knowledge of the Solanos since in the clearing where he had sold them for the silver dollar. Torres' stick fell upon his head, five times, ten times, and went on falling with the certitude that in all eternity there would be no cessation unless he told the truth.

And, after all, he was a miserable and wretched thing, spirit broken by beatings from the cradle, and the sting of Torres' stick, with the threat of the plentitude of the stick what meant the death of his own owner, the hacendado, could not afford, made him give in and point the way of the chase.

A Matter of Taste

But his day of tribulation had only begun. Scarcely had he betrayed the Solanos the second time and still on his knees, when the hacendado, with the posse of neighboring hacendados and overseers he had called to his help, burst upon the scene astride sweating horses.

"My peon, senors," announced the hacendado, itching to be at him. "You maltreat him?"

"And why not?" demanded the Jefe.

"Because he is mine to maltreat, and I wish to do it myself."

The peon crawled and squirmed to the Jefe's feet and begged and entreated not to be given up. But he begged for mercy where there was no mercy.

"Certainly, Senor," the Jefe said to the hacendado. "We give him back to you. We must uphold the law, and he is your property. Besides, we have no further use for him. Yet he is a most excellent peon, senor. He has done what no peon has ever done in the history of Panama. He has told the truth twice in one day."

His hands tied together in front of him and hitched by a rope to the horn of the overseer's saddle, the peon was towed away on the chocolate, with a certain apprehension that the worst of his beatings for that day was very imminent. Nor was he mistaken. Back at the plantation he was tied like an animal to a post of a barbed wire fence, while his owner and the friends of his owner were hurriedly in the capture went into the hacienda to take their 12 o'clock breakfast.

After that, he knew what he was to receive. But the barbed wire of the fence, and the lone mare in the paddock behind it, built an idea in the desperate mind of the peon. Though the sharp barbs of the wire again and again cut his wrist, he quickly sawed through his bonds, free save for the law, crawled under the fence, led the lame mare through the gate, mounted her bareback, and, with naked heels tattooing her ribs, galloped her away toward the safety of the Cordilleras.

CHAPTER IX.

IN the meantime, the Solanos were being overworked. And Henry teased Francis with:

"Here in the jungle is where dollars are worthless. They can buy neither fresh horses, nor can they repair those two spineless creatures which must likewise be afflicted with the misrain that carried off the rest of the hacendados riding animals."

"I've never been in a place yet where money wouldn't work," Francis replied.

Leoncia clapped her hands.

"Just the same, I have an idea I can make dollars work in the jungle, and I am going to try it right now." Francis continued, at the same time untying the cotnack from Leoncia's pommel. "You go ahead and ride on."

"But you must tell me," Leoncia insisted, and, aside, in her ear, as she leaned to him from the saddle, he whispered what made her laugh again, while Henry, conferring with Enrico and his sons, inwardly berated himself for being a jealous fool.

Before they were out of sight, looking back, they saw Francis, with pad and pencil out, writing something. What he wrote was eloquently brief, merely the figure "50." Tearing off the sheet, he laid it conspicuously in the middle of the trail and weighted it down with a silver dollar. Counting out forty-nine dollars from the bag, he sowed them very immediately about the first one and ran up the trail after his party.

Augustino, the gendarme who rarely spoke when he was sober, but who when drunk preached valubly of wisdom of silence, was in the lead, with bent head nosing the track of the quarry, when his keen eye lighted on the silver dollar holding down the sheet of paper. The first he appropriated, the second he turned over to the Jefe. Torres looked over his shoulder, and together they read the mystic "50." The Jefe tossed the scrap of paper aside as of little account, and was for resuming the chase, but Augustino picked up and pondered the "50" thoughtfully.

Even as he pondered it, a shout from Rafael advertised the finding of another dollar. Then Augustino knew. There were fifty of the coins to be had for the picking up. Flinging the note to the wind, he was on hands and knees overhauling the ground. The rest of the party joined in the scramble, while Torres and the Jefe screamed curses on them in a vain effort to make them proceed.

When the gendarmes could find no more, they counted up what they had recovered. The toll came to forty-seven.

"There are three more," cried Rafael, whereupon all flung themselves into the search again. Five minutes more were lost, are the other three coins were found. Each pocketed what he had retrieved and obediently swung into the pursuit at the heels of Torres and the Jefe.

A mile further on, Torres tried to trample a shining dollar into the dirt, but Augustino, who had been had been too quick and his eager fingers dug it out of the soft earth. Where was one dollar, as they had already learned, there were more dollars. The posse came to a halt, and while the two leaders fumed and impreciated, the rest of the members cast about right and left from the trail.

Vincente, a moon-faced gendarme who looked more like a Mexican Indian than a Maya or a Panamanian "breed," lighted first on the clew. All gathered about, like hounds around a tree into which the possum had been run. In truth, it was a tree, or a rotten stump of one, a dozen feet in height and a third as many feet in diameter. Five feet from the ground was an opening. Above the opening, pinned in by a thorn, was a sheet of paper the same size as the first they had found. On it was written "100."

The Lure of Coin

In the scramble that ensued, half a dozen minutes were lost as half a dozen right arms strove to be first in diving into the hollow heart of the stump to the treasure. But the hollow extended deeper than their arms were long.

"We will chop down the stump," Rafael cried, sounding with the back of his machete against the side of it to locate the base of the hollow. "We will all chop, and we will count what we find inside and divide it equally."

By this time their leaders were frantic, and the Jefe had begun threatening the moment they were back in San Antonio to send them to San Juan, where their carcases would be picked up by buzzards.

"But we are not back in San Antonio, thank God," said Augustino, breaking his sober seal of silence in order to enunciate wisdom.

"We are poor man, and we will divide in fairness," spoke up Rafael. "Augustino is right, and thank God for it that we are not back in San Antonio. This rich Gringo scatters more money along the way in a day for us to pick up than we could earn in a year where we come from. I, for one, am for revolution, where money is so plentiful."

"With the rich Gringo for a leader. For as long as he leads this way could I follow him forever."

"If," Rafael nodded agreement, with a pitch of his head toward Torres and Jefe, "if they do not give up opportunity to gather it for us, then to the last and deepest of the roasting bells of hell for them. We are men, not slaves. The world is wide. The Cordilleras are just beyond. We will all be rich and free men, and live in the Cordilleras, where the Indian maidens are wildly beautiful and destrable——"

"And we will be well rid of our wives back in San Antonio," said Vincente. "Let us now chop down this treasure tree."

Swinging their machetes with heavy, hacking blows, the wood, so rotten that it was spongy, gave way readily before their blades. And when the stump fell over they counted and divided, in equity not one hundred dollars, but one hundred and forty-seven.

"He is generous, this Gringo," quoth Vincente. "He leaves more than he says. May there not be still more.

And, from the debris of rotten wood, much of it crumbled to powder under their blows, they recovered five more coins, in the doing of which they lost ten more minutes that drove Torres and the Jefe to the verge of madness.

"He does not stop to count, the wealthy Gringo," said Rafael. "He must surely open that sack and pour it out. And that is the sack with which he rode to the beach of San Antonio when he blew up with dynamite the wall of our jail."

The chase was resumed, and all went well for half an hour, when they came upon an abandoned freehold, already half overrun with the returning jungle. A dilapidated, straw-thatched house, fallen in, labor barracks, a broken-down corral, the very post of which had sprouted and leaved into growing trees, and a well showing recent use by virtue of a fresh length of riata attaching bucket to well-sweep, showed where some men had failed to tame the wild. And, conspicuous on the well-sweep was pinned a familiar sheet of paper on which was written "50."

"Mother of God!—a fortune!" cried Rafael.

"May the devil forever torture him in the last and latest hell!" was Torres' contribution.

"He pays better than your Senor Regan," the Jefe sneered in despair and disgust.

Torres Discourages

His bag of silver is only so large," Torres retorted. "It seems we must pick it all up before we catch him. But when we have picked it all up, and his bag is empty, then will we catch him."

"We will go on now, comrades," the Jefe addressed his posse ingratiatingly. "Afterward we will return at our leisure and recover the silver."

Augustino broke his seal of silence again.

"One never knows the way of one's return, if one ever returns," he enunciated pessimistically. Elated by the pearl of wisdom he had dropped, he essayed another. "Three hundred in hand is better than three million in the bottom of a well we may never see again."

"Some one must descend into the well," spoke Rafael, testing the bruised rope with his weight. "Real The riata is strong. We will lower a man by it. Who is the brave one who will go down?"

"I," said Vincente, "I will be the brave one to go down——"

"And steal half of that you find," Rafael uttered his instant suspicion. "If you go down, first must you count over to us the pesos you already possess. Then when you come up we can account you for all you have found. After that, when we have divided equitably, will your other pesos be returned to you."

"Then will I not go down for comrades who have no trust in me." Vincente said stubbornly.

"Here, beside the well, I am as wealthy as any of you. Why then should I go down? I have heard of men dying in the bottom of wells."

"In God's name go down!" stormed the Jefe. "Hastel Haste!

"I am too fat, the rope is not strong, and I shall not go down," said Vincente.

All looked to Augustino, the silent one, who had already spoken more than he was accustomed to speak in a week.

"Guillermo is the thinnest and the lightest," said Augustino.

"Guillermo will go down!" the rest chorused.

But Guillermo, glaring apprehensively at the mouth of the well, backed away, shaking his head and crossing himself.

"Not for the sacred treasure in the secret city of the Mayas," he muttered.

The Jefe pulled his revolver and glanced to the remainder of the posse for confirmation. With eyes and head-nods they gave it.

"In Heaven's name go down," he threatened the little gendarme. "And make haste, or I shall put you in such a fix that never again will you go up or down, but you will remain here and rot forever beside this hole of perdition. Is it well, comrades, that I kill him if he does not go down?"

"It is well," they shouted.

And Guillermo, with trembling fingers, counted out the coins he had already retrieved, and, in the throes of fear, crossing himself repeatedly and urged on by the hand-thrust of his companions, stepped upon the bucket, sat down on it with legs wrapped about it, and was lowered away out of the light of day.

"Stop!" he screamed up the shaft. "Stop! Stop! The water! I am upon it!"

Those on the sweep held it with their weight.

"I should receive ten pesos extra above my share," he called up.

"You shall receive baptism," was called down to him, and, variously: "You will have your share this day;" "We will let go;" "We will cut the rope." There will be one less with whom to share."

"The water is not nice," he remarked, his voice rising like a ghost's out of the dark depth. "There are slick lizards and a dead bird that stinks. And there may be snakes. It is well worth ten pesos extra what I must do."

"We will drown you!" Rafael shouted.

A Bold Threat.

"I shall fire down upon you and kill you!" the Jefe bulled.

"Shoot or drop me," Guillermo's voice floated up; "but it will buy you nothing, for the treasure will still be in the well."

There was a pause, in which those at the surface questioned each other with their eyes as to what they should do.

"And the Gringos are running away farther and farther," Torres fumed. "A fine discipline you have, Senor Mariano Bercara e Hijos, over your gendarmes!"

"This is not San Antonio," the Jefe dared back. "This is the bush of Juchitan. "My dogs are good dogs in San Antonio. In the bush they must be handled gently, else they may become wild dogs, and what then will happen to you and me?"

"It is the curse of gold," Torres surrendered sadly. "It is almost enough to make one become a soldier, with a Gringo thus tying the hands of justice with ropes of gold."

"Of silver," the Jefe corrected.

"You go, to hell," said Torres. "As you have pointed out, this is not San Antonio but the bush of Juchitan, and here I may well tell you to go to hell. Why should you and I quarrel because of your bad temper, when our prosperity depends on standing together?"

"Besides," the voice of Guillermo drifted up, "the water is not two feet deep. You cannot drown me in it. I have just felt for the bottom and I have four round silver pesos in my hand right now. The bottom is carpeted with pesos. Do you want to let go? Or do I get ten pesos extra for the filthy job? The water smells like a fresh grave-yard."

"Yes! Yes" they shouted down.

"Which? Let go? Or the extra ten?"

"The extra ten!" they chorused.

"In God's name, haste! haste!" cried the Jefe.

The heard splashings and curses from the bottom of the well and, from the lightening of the strain on the riata, knew that Guillermo had left the bucket and was floundering for the coins.

"Put it in the bucket, good Guillermo," Rafael called down.

"I am putting it in my pockets," up came the reply. "Did I put it in the bucket you might haul it up first and well forget to haul me up afterward."

The double weight might break the riata," Rafael cautioned.

"The riata may not be so strong as my will, for my will to this matter is most strong," said Guillermo.

"If the riata should break——" Rafael began again.

"I have a resolution," said Guillermo. "Do you come down. Then shall I go up first. Second, the treasure shall go up in the bucket. And, third and last, shall you go up. Thus will justice be triumphant."

Rafael, with dropped jaw of dismay, did not reply.

"Are you coming, Rafael?"

"No," he answered. "Put all the silver in your pockets and come up together with it."

"I could curse the race that bore me," was the impatient observation of the Jefe.

"I have already cursed it," said Torres.

"Haul away!" shouted Guillermo. "I have everything in my pockets save the stetch, and I am suffocating. Haul quick, or I shall perish, and the three hundred pesos will perish with me. And there are more than three hundred. He must have emptied the bag."

Ahead, on the trail, where the way grew steep and the horses without steaming rested and panted, Francis overtook his party.

A Brilliant Idea

"Never again shall I travel without minted coin of the realm," he exulted, as he described what he had remained behind to see from the edge of the deserted plantation. "Henry, when I die and go to heaven I shall have a stout bag of cash along with me. Even there could it redeem me from heaven alone knows what scrapes. Listen! They fought like cats and dogs about the mouth of the well.

"Nobody would trust anybody to descend into the well unless he deposited what he had previously picked up with those that remained at the top. They were out of hand. The Jefe, at the point of his gun, had to force the lightest and leanest of them to go down. And when he was down he blackmailed them before he would come up. And when he came up they broke their promises and gave him a beating. They were still beating him when I left."

"But now your sack is empty," said Henry.

"Which is our present and most pressing trouble," Francis agreed. "Had I sufficient pesos I could keep the pursuit well behind us forever. I'm afraid I was too generous. I did not know how cheap the poor devils were. But I'll tell you something that will make your hair stand up. Torres, Senor Torres, Senor Alvarez Torres, the elegant gentleman and old-time friend of your Solanos, is heading the pursuit along with the Jefe. He is furious at the delay. They almost had a rupture because the Jefe couldn't keep his men in hand. Yes, sir, and he told the Jefe to go to hell. I distinctly heard him tell the Jefe to go to hell."

Five miles further on, the horses of Leoncia and her father collapsed, where the trail plunged into and ascended a dark ravine. Francis urged the other on and dropped behind. Giving them a few minutes' start, he followed on behind, a self-constituted rearguard. Part way along, in an open space where grew only a thick acid of grass, he was dismayed to find the hoof prints of two horses staring at him as large as dinner plates from out of the sod.

Into the hoof prints had welled a dark, slimy fluid that his eye told him was crude oil. This was but the beginning, a sort of seepage from a side stream above off the main flow. A hundred yards beyond he came upon the flow itself, a river of oil that on such a slope would have been a cataract had it been water. But, being crude oil, as thick as molasses, it oozed slowly down the hill like so much molasses.

And here, preferring to make his stand rather than to wade through the sticky mess, Francis sat down on a rock, laid his rifle on one side of him, his automatic pistol on the other side, rolled a cigarette and kept his ears pricked for the first sounds of the pursuit.

* * * * *

And the beaten peon, threatened with more beatings and belaboring his over-ridden mare, rode across the top of the ravine above Francis and, at the oil well itself, had his exhausted animal collapse under him. With his heels he kicked her back to her feet and with a stick belabored her to stagger away from him and on and into the jungle. And the first day of his adventures, though he did not know it, was not yet over. He, too, squatted on a stone, his feet in the oil, rolled a cigarette and, as he smoked it, contemplated the flowing oil well.

The noise of approaching men startled him, and he fled into the immediately adjacent jungle, from which he peered forth and saw two strange men appear. They came directly to the well and by an iron wheel turning the valve, choked down the flow still further.

"No more," commanded the one who seemed to be the leader, "another turn and the pressure will blow out the pipes—for so the Gringo engineer has warned me most carefully."

No, the two oil men had seen nobody. But the hacienado who led saw the footprints of the mare and spurred his horse to follow, his crowd at his heels.

But the peon could not understand.

"How much are your clothes worth—all you've got on?"

"Half a peso; nay half of a half peso," the peon admitted, ruefully, surveying what was left of his tattered rags.

"And other property?"

Nothing but Debt

The wretched creature shrugged his shoulders in token of his utter destitution, then added bitterly:

"I possess nothing but a debt. I owe two hundred and fifty pesos. I am tied to it for life, damned with it for life. I like a man with a cancer. That is why I am a slave to the hacienda."

"Hah!" Francis could not forbear to grin. "Worth two hundred and fifty pesos less than nothing, not even a cipher, a sheer abstraction of a minus quantity without existence save in the mathematical imagination of man, and yet here you are burning up not less than millions of pesos' worth of oil. And if the strata is loose and erratic and the oil leaks up outside the tubing, the chances are that the oil-body of the entire field is ignited—say a billion dollars' worth. Say, for an abstraction enjoying two hundred and fifty dollars' worth of nonexistence, you are some hombre, believe me."

Nothing of which the peon understood save the word "hombre."

"I am a man," he proclaimed, thrusting out his chest and straightening up his bruised head. "I am a hombre, and I am a Maya."

"Maya Indian—you?" Francis scoffed.

"Half Maya," was the reluctant admission. "My father is pure Maya. But the Maya women of the Cordilleras did not satisfy him. He must love a mixed-breed woman of the tierra caliente. I was so born, but she afterwards betrayed him for a Barbadoes nigger, and he went back to the Cordilleras to live.

"And like my father, I was born to love a mixed-breed of the tierra caliente. She wanted money, and my head was fevered with want of her, and I sold myself to be a peon for two hundred pesos. And I saw never her nor the money again. For five years I have slaved and been beaten, and behold, at the end of five years my debt is not two hundred, but two hundred and fifty pesos."

And while Francis Morgan and the long-suffering Maya half-breed pickaxed deeper into the Cordilleras to overtake their party, and while the oil fields of Juchitan continued to go up in increasing smoke, still further on, in the heart of the Cordilleras, were preparing other events destined to bring together all pursuers and all pursued—Francis and Henry and Leoncia and their party; the peon; the party of the hacienadados, and the gendarmes of the Jefe, and along with them, Alvarez Torres, eager to win for himself not only the promised reward of Thomas Regan, but the possession of Leoncia Solano.

A Man and a Woman

In a cave sat a man and a woman. Pretty, the latter was, and young, a mestiza, or half-caste woman. By the light of the peon's kerosene lamp she read aloud from a calfbound tome, which was a Spanish translation of Blackstone. Both were bearmed, clad in hooded gabardines of sack cloth. Her head lay back on her shoulders, exposing her black and generous head of hair.

But the old man's hood was cowled about his head after the fashion of a monk. The face, lofty and ascetic, beaked with power, was pure Spanish. Don Quixote might have worn precisely a similar face. But there was a difference. The eyes of this old man were closed in the perpetual dark of the blind. Never could he behold a windmill at which to tilt.

He sat, while the pretty mestiza read to him, listening and brooding, for all the world in the pose of Rodin's "Thinker." Nor was he a dreamer nor a tilter of windmills, like Don Quixote.

What Has Happened in "Hearts of Three" So Far

FRANCIS MORGAN, a young New York millionaire, heavily interested in oil, meets Alvarez Torres, an adventurer, in the Wall street office of Thomas Regan, who has an old score to pay off against Francis' father. Torres tells Francis he has the key to the hidden treasure of Sir Henry Morgan, the buccaneer. Francis goes to Central America in quest of the cache, Torres agreeing to follow. The young man hires a schooner, rows ashore and meets a beautiful girl, who pulls him toward the jungle. He is mystified, but she asks for a kiss, bursts into tears and send him away just in time to escape being shot by advancing Spaniards. Francis sails to an island held by Henry Morgan, also a descendant of the pirate. The girl who kissed Francis proves to be Leoncia Solano, engaged to Henry. The men come to blows, but afterward make up, and Francis, learning that Henry is believed to have killed Leoncia's uncle, goes back with the engagement ring, denies the rumor and puts the ring on the girl's finger, explaining that she took him for Henry. Torres, who is at the Solano hacienda, sees Francis give Leoncia the ring and is infuriated. He contrives to have Francis arrested, and when he is freed, through the arrival of Henry, the latter is put in jail, and Leoncia begs her family to help save them. Torres declares his love for Leoncia, but plots to have Henry hanged and Francis killed on the sly. Leoncia and the Solanos blow up the jail, and Henry escapes with Francis, Leoncia and the Solanos to the schooner.

Novel Written Just Before Famous Author's Death One of His Best

The peon waited, smoked his cigarette quite to the finish, and cogitated. When all was clear, he ventured forth, turned the mechanism controlling the well wide open, watched the oil fountaining upward under the subterranean pressure and flowing down the mountain in a veritable river. Also, he listened to and noted the sobbing gasping and bubbling of the escaping gas. This he did not comprehend, and all that saved him for his further adventures was the fact that he had used his last match to light his cigarette. In vain he searched his rags, his ears, and his hair. He was out of matches.

So, chuckling at the river of oil he saw was only running to waste, and remembering the canyon trail below, he plunged down the mountainside and upon Francis, who received him with extended automatic. Down went the peon on his frayed and fraxiled knees in terror and supplication to the man he had twice betrayed that day. Francis studied him, at first without recognition, because of the bruised and lacerated face and head on which the blood had dried like a mask.

"Amigo, amigo," chattered the peon.

No Way of Escape

"They will kill me! They will beat me to death! They are very angry," the wretch quavered. "You are my only friend, my father and mother, save me."

"Can you shoot?" Francis demanded.

"I was a hunter in the Cordilleras before I was sold into slavery, Senor," was the reply.

Francis passed him the automatic, motioned him to take shelter and told him not to fire until sure of a hit.

Then came the Jefe, Torres, and the gendarmes down the trail. As abruptly he fired his rifle, and as he told the Jefe to go to hell. I distinctly heard him tell the Jefe to go to hell."

Five miles further on, the horses of Leoncia and her father collapsed, where the trail plunged into and ascended a dark ravine. Francis urged the other on and dropped behind. Giving them a few minutes' start, he followed on behind, a self-constituted rearguard. No, the two oil men had seen nobody. But the hacienado who led saw the footprints of the mare and spurred his horse to follow, his crowd at his heels.

CHAPTER X.

WHILE Francis and the peon hurried up the ravine trail in safety, the ravine itself, below where the oil flowed in, had become a river of flame, which drove the Jefe, Torres and the gendarmes to scale the steep wall of the ravine. At the same time the party of hacienadados in pursuit of the peon was compelled to claw back and up to escape out of the roaring canyon.

Even the peon glanced back over his shoulder, until, with a cry of joy, he indicated a second black smoke pillar rising in the air beyond the first burning well.

NO COMMISSIONS PAID TO INCOME TAX FIGURERS

"Revenue officers engaged in checking up income tax returns are on a salaried basis, and there is no incentive to add to the correct amount of the tax due," declared Internal Revenue Collector John F. Malley when his attention was called to reports that some taxpayers are under the impression that revenue agents sent out to check up returns are receiving "commissions" on amounts found due the government.

BARS CLOSE AS WETS PROTEST PROHIBITION

Mass Meeting at Mechanics' Hall Tonight to Test Sentiment

War prohibition and every other form of prohibition that deprives the working man of a nip now and then is scheduled for rough usage at a big protest meeting tonight in Mechanics Building, and just to show the city how it feels to have a parched throat all saloons and hotel bars will close at 6 o'clock.

The Hotel Men's and Retail and Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association have so decreed and the big hall is ready to fill to the overflowing with thirsty adherents and those who are the enemy of prohibition just for the sake of a principle.

"FITZY" TO SPEAK.

Congressmen John F. Fitzgerald, James A. Gallivan and many other eloquent speakers will tell why America is a better place to live in with light wines and beers than it would be under the bonds of complete prohibition.

The session will be held under the auspices of the Massachusetts Branch, Association Opposed to National Prohibition. Music will be provided by the Salem Cadet Band and no admission will be charged. Every man who likes a nip now and then and those who depend upon him for their living are also expected to be on hand.

Among the speakers will be C. A. Windle, editor of Iconoclast, who will have for his subject, "The Failure of Prohibition." He invites heckling of the sincere variety from all. A box near the stage has been reserved for the hecklers of the Anti-Saloon League. A lively meeting is expected and as far as Boston is concerned, it's going to be pretty dry.

"DRYS" TO GET SURPRISE.

The action of the Hotel Men and Retail and Wholesale Dealers' Association was a voluntary one. Both organizations had voted to give Boston a taste of bone-dry prohibition without even consulting the Massachusetts Branch, Association opposed to National Prohibition.

Officials of the latter organization say that the action of the liquor dealers was a surprise to them. The Association Opposed to National Prohibitions, according to its officials, is in no way allied with any liquor interests.

BOY SCOUTS, IN GREAT DRIVE, SWEEP U. S.

Corps of Workers Campaigns Boston for 31,250 New Members

A drive for 1,000,000 associate members of the Boy Scouts, headed by William G. McAdoo, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, and endorsed by President Wilson and other prominent men, began throughout the country today.

Boston's share is 31,250, while Massachusetts has been asked to secure 62,493 and the whole of New England $2,352. James J. Storrow is New England chairman. With him are associated Charles G. Bancroft, treasurer, and Louis E. Kerstein, chairman of the publicity committee.

Early today a corps of campaign workers started out in this city, under the direction of George S. Smith, president of the City Club and ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce.

WILSON INDORSES DRIVE.

Mr. Smith had organized the city into districts and appointed chairmen not only in these districts, but in the larger buildings and other places.

Announcement of the start of the campaign was made when President Wilson's proclamation was read from many pulpits yesterday. Mayor Peters has also issued the following statement:

"There is to be a national drive for an associate membership in the Boy Scouts of America for at least 1,000,000 adults, men and women, that the $75,000 Boy Scouts in America may realize that the men and women believe in their work.

"The aim of the Boy Scout movement is to teach first aid, life-saving, tracking, signaling, nature study, seamanship, carpentry, woodcraft, chivalry, patriotism and other objects it can be readily seen that such equipment gives to the community through its boys a very great value and asset.

"BE PREPARED" IS MOTTO.

"The Scouting motto is: 'Be Prepared,' be prepared to meet his duty and any emergency. The Scout oath is: 'On my honor, I will do my best.

"1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout law.

"2. To help other people at all times.

"3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.'

"May I not urge the citizens of Boston to become associate members in this splendid organization, which is preparing the boys of today to be upstanding, fine citizens of tomorrow?"

Throughout the week there will be a troop of Boy Scouts on Boston Common, and each afternoon they will give exhibitions of the things they are taught. There will be a new troop each day.

Each associate member will pay dues of $1 or more, and the $3 request only will the campaign resemble others that have gone before.

Who Killed Talking Ape? Professors Now at Odds

Who killed the Missing Link—the talking ape?

Professor L. R. Garner returned last week to New York from the Congo district, with tale of an ape which he killed which was the nearest thing he had seen to man in his years of monkey study. The ape had at least two words or calls, "Wahoo and Hoo-hoo."

But Professor Charles R. Aschemeir of the Smithsonian Institute has just returned to Baltimore from the Congo wilds with the assertion that he and not Professor Garner found and killed a talking ape, the so-called Missing Link.

Professor Aschemeir declares, too, that neither Professor Garner or any other scientist had made progress in learning ape language.

The Congo apes, too, have a clatter of their own, he says, but no human understands it, not even the low-grade natives of the district.

MAN WHO PASSED BOGUS $10 BILL IS EXONERATED

Samuel Fish, twenty-five, of Quincy, who was arrested Saturday, charged with passing a counterfeit $10 bill which had been "raised" from a $2 Federal Reserve certificate, today was exonerated and discharged by United States Commissioner Hayes in the Federal Court at the request of United States Attorney Daniel A. Shea, who told Commissioner Hayes that Fish was innocent.

Fish hired a room on Tremont street and tendered the "raised" bill for his rent. His landlord, through a neighboring shopkeeper, learned that the bill was counterfeit. Fish was arrested and Secret Service Agent Owen McKenna made an investigation which showed that Fish's mother had given him the bill. Mrs. Fish said she got the bill from a woman neighbor who in turn said a newsboy gave it to her.

AWARD STREET PAVING CONTRACTS FOR $107,000

Contracts calling for an expenditure of about $107,000 for new pavement in several streets were awarded today by Mayor Peters. The Central Construction Company is to lay the pavement in Greenville, Newburn, Haynes, Boston and Williams streets for $51,178. The Rowe Construction Company is to pave Gertrude street, from Elliot street across Allandale street, for $45,575.50. James Doherty is to lay granite block for the Transit Department in Newbury street for $10,180.

To Plan a Successful Summer Home

—does not demand a mansion by the sea; indeed, many a town house has been converted into a most successful summer home, and at moderate expense.

To plan a successful summer home does require good taste and judgment and the art of knowing how.

The illustration suggests what may be done at small expense for a summer bedroom: Bedstead $27, Bureau $38, Chiffonier $37—painted a soft straw color, and given an unusually smart touch by painting the top and knobs of bureau and chiffonier and the caps of the bedposts a cool-looking blue.

For the living room select slip covers of cretonne or linen, wicker chairs if needed, inexpensive yet effective draperies and cool-looking rugs, and the winter home will delight all with its pleasing summer dress.

Paine service includes just such suggestions as these for those who desire them.

SUBURBS BUSY IN FORMING LEGION POSTS

Col. Logan to Lead South Boston Veterans at Meeting Tonight

All ex-soldiers, ex-sailors and ex-marines of the Peninsular District will gather tonight in the Municipal Building, to organize a post in the American Legion named after South Boston's "favorite son," Colonel Edward L. Logan, calling the veterans to order at 8 o'clock. Prominent among the evening's speakers will be Colonel John F. Hurley of Worcester, chairman of the Massachusetts organization of the Legion.

Newton's veterans will gather in the Technical High School on the evening of June 16 to organize a post to the Legion and Sergeant-Major Strandquist of the 102d Machine Gun Battalion of the Yankee Division, who was a delegate to the St. Louis caucus last March, will preside. The proposed Newton post will include the veterans of Newton and also Newtonville.

WINCHESTER TO HEAR CONNELLY

Major Edward J. Connelly of Wakefield will speak in the interests of the Legion Tuesday evening at the Winchester Town Hall. Theodore Lawson is temporary chairman of the committee, and all ex-sailors, ex-marines and ex-soldiers of the town are invited to be present.

Arlington's Town Hall will be crowded Wednesday evening, when Judge John G. Brackett will preside over an open meeting of the Legion. The formation of the post is receiving widespread interest in the "lower Middlesex" district, a delegate to the St. Louis caucus, is boasting that the historical spot will put across the liveliest post in the Bay State. The temporary meetings already held have been of unusual interest.

Colonel Herbert will be present and after outlining the aims and policies of the legion to the Arlington veterans will go to Roslindale, where he will speak at the meeting of the Mt. Hope, West Roxbury and Roslindale proposed post. Sergeant-Major "Jim" McGrath and Lieutenant A. J. Kelley will bring the veterans of "attention" in the municipal building, Roslindale, at 8:30 p. m.

MANY SESSIONS PLANNED.

Arrangements are being made to have Dorchester's veterans gather the latter part of the week in the ward room in Codman square. Major Fred Bogan and Colonel George F. Quinby have been invited by a committee of former enlisted men of the district to attend the meeting and speak. Corporal Dominic Tinglof, formerly of D Company of "Boston's Own," 101st Infantry, is in charge of the meeting, the date of which will be announced later.

A canvass of delegates present at the State meeting held in the Bancroft Hotel recently showed that posts in the Legion were under way in the following cities and towns of the State:

Quincy, Fitchburg, Boston, Canton, Roxbury, Allston, Brighton, Marblehead, Haverhill, Dorchester (Ward 18), Attleboro, North Attleboro, Watertown, Brockton, Somerville, Lawrence, Worcester, Springfield, Newton, Charlestown, West Newton, Clinton, Orange, Lawrence, Brookline, Marlboro, Barre, Northampton, Medford, Fall River, Lowell, Chelsea, Wakefield, Winchester and Southbridge.

Somerville Active in Forming Legion Post; Plan City-Wide Drive

Application for a charter in the American Legion has been applied for by Captain George A. Mack, who was elected temporary commander of a group of former service men and women residents of Somerville, for a post to be established in Somerville.

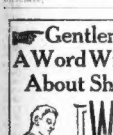
Temporary headquarters have been established in the rooms of the Girard Ski Civic Association at No. 213 Highland avenue.

A special meeting of the executive committee and all others interested will be held tonight in the Red Cross building for the purpose of reporting on the business of the Worcester conference and for outlining plans for an outdoor membership rally soon to be held on Prospect hill at which the speakers will include Chaplain Lyman A. Rollins of the 101st Regiment, 26th Division, and William J. Shanahan of Somerville.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR CHANDLER TOMORROW

Funeral services for Horace Parker Chandler, who died Saturday afternoon, will be held from his late home, No. 92 Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. Julian K. Smythe of New York, former pastor of the Roxbury Swedenborgian Church, will officiate.

Gentlemen A Word With You About Shaving



WHEN you buy a Safety Razor, buy a cake of Cuticura Soap and shave the Cuticura way. You get the healthy up-to-date way. No mug, no slimy soap, no germs, no free alkali, no waste, no irritation even when shaved twice daily. One soap for all uses—shaving, bathing, shampooing—absolutely nothing like it, not to speak of its value in promoting skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. Largest selling skin soap in the world.

Cuticura Toilet Trio

Consisting of Soap, Ointment and Talcum are indispensable adjuncts of the daily toilet in maintaining skin purity and skin health. Bringing these delicately medicated emollients in frequent contact with your skin is in use for all toilet purposes, tends to keep the skin, scalp and hair clear, pure and healthy. 25c each everywhere.

SUNSET PARADE ON COMMON JULY 4

Erect Stage at Frog Pond for Patriotic Demonstration Following March

A military sunset ceremony with international parade on the Common, followed by a patriotic demonstration at the natural amphitheater around the Frog Pond, in the centre of which a stage is to be erected, will feature the observance of Independence Day, July 4th.

During the day there will be the usual patriotic exercises, games and sports for children, the annual oration exercises at Faneuil Hall following the historic reading of the Declaration of Independence on the balcony of the Old State House, band concerts, flag raisings, athletic meet and swimming races in the Charles.

Mayor Peters will officially open the day's program with a flag raising on the Common, assisted by war veterans and army and navy officers. The athletic meet on the Common will be a joint military, naval and civilian event, the details of which are being worked out by a sub-chairman, in co-operation with Captain J. B. Mackie, army athletic director, and Lieutenant H. M. Hoag, navy athletic officer. They will have the assistance of George V. Brown of the B. A. A. and Hugh C. Macdrath of the Park and Recreation Department.

The plans for the day are being arranged by the Independence Day committee of the Citizens' Public Celebration Association, with the approval of Mayor Peters and in cooperation with Director of Public Celebrations John F. Dexter.

The Independence Day Committee is composed of Chairman E. U. Curtis, Secretary William Carroll Hill, J. R. Archibald, Frank Chouteau Brown, John M. Casey, G. W. Coffruth, William J. Ferguson, E. L. Fredericks, H. F. Godfrey, John J. Keenan, John A. Kigger, Frank Leyroni, Daniel A. Mackay, James H. Phelan, Henry J. D. Small, George W. Tupper, together with Addison L. Winship, president of the Public Celebration Association and E. B. Mero, secretary.

THE DEAF HEAR

Fine, reading the numerous testimonials from those who were deaf and who have had their hearing restored by the Omo-Chemic Physicians, naturally assumes that the Omo-Chemic Methods are successful only in cases of deafness and ear troubles. This is far from the fact. A great many testimonials from patients who were successfully treated for other diseases are crowded out because of lack of space, and because there are so many more deaf people than those who suffer from other chronic troubles.

Mrs. Sarah B. Smith, who resides at 81 W. Rutland Sq., Boston, said to the writer, "I had suffered from Rheumatism and Anaemia, and the treatment I was taking not proving beneficial, acting upon the advice of many of my friends who had been treated successfully by the Omo-Chemic Physicians, I had them treat me. Their treatment benefited me at once, and I feel perfectly well now.

The wonderful power of the X-RAY TREATMENT is proved by the fact that they are accomplishing wonderful results in diseases of every description.

CATARRH, DEAFNESS, BRONCHITIS, STOMACH DISEASE, NERVOUS DISORDERS, BLOOD DISEASES, SKIN DISEASES, MARKS, MOLES, FACIAL BLEMISHES, etc.

No matter what your disease may be, remember that the Omo-Chemic Method gives

MANY CLOWNS ARRIVE WITH THE BIG CIRCUS

The circus is in town.

Huntington avenue plainly showed it. Not only the children but hundreds of grown-ups were on the train yards near the Mechanics Building to witness the arrival of the great Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus that will stay in this city all week.

Six big trains pulled into the Boston & Albany yard carrying elephants, giraffes and other "show offs," the pride of the owners of the circus. All day long the cars were unloaded and the animals carried either to the Huntington avenue grounds or Columbus avenue grounds. The latter site is for the stables.

Today the circus troup paraded through the Boston streets. School children were in evidence and enjoyed the shows. The circus, perhaps the largest traveling outfit today, has a skilful array of performers and the animals are many and varied. Its a great circus.

REV. J. I. J. CORRIGAN AT SUFFRAGE MEETING

Rev. James I. J. Corrigan, S. J., of Boston College, will be the principal speaker Thursday evening at the meeting of the Margaret Brent Suffrage Association at the Hotel Westminster. It will be the last meeting of the season. The literary and musical program will be preceded by a brief business meeting, and a supper at 6 o'clock. Those who will take part in the program will be Miss Mary E. Flynn, Edward Downey, Miss Irene Donahue, Miss Mary E. Murphy and Mrs. John O'Keeley.

Your National Parks With All Their Wonders

MAKE this a summer of vacation travel. Glorious out-of-door playgrounds beckon you. Heed the call. Get away and know the scenic beauties of your own land. Summer excursion fares.

Every American should visit the National Parks. They are the nation's playgrounds. Not only do you see peaks and canyons, glaciers and geysers, big trees and volcanoes, prehistoric ruins and Indians—you here see the old wilderness places of this country—the Far West and the Old West—practically unchanged.

In this vast region you can "rough it"—can camp out, climb high peaks, go fishing and ride horseback. Around the corner, so to speak, are miles of auto boulevards, modern resort hotels, and comfortable camps.

RUSH PLANS FOR NATION-WIDE WIRE STRIKE

Konenkamp Calls Conference in Chicago; Workers Confident

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 9.—Preparations for the nation-wide strike of telegraph operators to be called June 11 were under way and "nearly completed" today.

S. J. Konenkamp, international president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, arrived here Sunday, after issuing the call for the strike from Pittsburgh Saturday night, and immediately called a conference to perfect plans for the strike. Konenkamp issued the following statement last night:

"Telegrams are coming in from all sections of the country that show that the workers are confident of success despite the lockout of more than 200 members of the union by the Western Union Company during the past thirty-six hours.

2,800 MEN FORCED OUT.

"This makes a total of over 2,800 union workers driven out of Western Union service in three days. The main cause of the impending trouble is the attitude of President Carlton and his influence with Postmaster-General Burleson. Burleson and Carlton are of one mind on the labor question.

"The Postal and American Telephone & Telegraph Companies are involved on the broader question of collective bargaining.

"The Wire Administration has denied the right of any company to bargain collectively.

"The Western Union fight will be the bitterest because Carlton has declared that no power on earth can compel him to permit union men and women to work for that telegraph company.

"Instead of trying to preserve industrial peace our employers have been busily engaged for over a year in driving us into industrial war.

IGNORE JUSTICE OF CLAIMS.

"It will be noted that the telegraph officials have nothing to say about the justice of our claims. The only thing they are concerned about is whether we have the power to get our demands by striking. We have that power."

Meanwhile the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is preparing to have its men on strike by June 16. What action will be taken regarding the calling out of press association and brokers operators has not been yet decided upon.

President Wilson Will Keep His "Hands Off" in Threatened Strike of Telegraphers

By International News Service.

Washington, June 9.—President Wilson will pursue a policy of "hands off" in the nation wide strike of commercial telegraphers called for Wednesday.

This was emphasized at the White House today when officials stated that although the matter probably had been brought to the attention of the President no communications had been sent through White House channels. They were in a position to state positively, these officials said, that the attitude of the President is that the strike is a matter to be handled entirely by the Postoffice department in conjunction with other government agencies which might have jurisdiction—such as the Department of Labor and the National War Labor Board.

MANY SOLDIERS' QUESTIONS ARE ANSWERED

Chief of Staff Tells How Officers' Families May Be Transported Overseas

In answer to several inquiries received by the Soldiers' Service Bureau with relation to transportation overseas of members of officers' families assigned to duty with the Army of occupation, the chief of staff of the War Department at Washington has approved recommendations from the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Division, which established the following policy with reference in this matter:

"Application for transportation must originate with the officer serving abroad and such application must be transmitted to the War Department through the commanding general of the American expeditionary forces, thus insuring (a) that the officer desires his wife or other immediate member of his family to join him, (b) that such request meets with the approval of the commanding general, A. E. F., and that the period of duty to which the officer is assigned is sufficient to justify his wife or other immediate member of his family joining him.

"The formal application must be accompanied by certification from the officer or enlisted man that the request for transportation is for his wife or member of his immediate family and that such member is dependent upon him for support.

"The officer or enlisted man should further state that he is able to provide accommodation for his wife or member of his family and to care for such person without financial assistance from the United States and that the cost of transportation being unavailable, he will be prepared to obtain for them return passage on a commercial liner."

HARVARD SPORTS WARNED

Crimson Athletic Heads Point Out the Dangers of Professionalism

The arrival of final examinations and the approach of Summer vacation with its attendant independent athletics for the students of Harvard has caused the Harvard A. A. to issue a warning to all varsity athletes concerning eligibility.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton, however, have seldom had trouble with each other over Summer baseball or professionalism because of a strict agreement among the three.

A copy of the following rules has been sent to all players on Harvard varsity teams and crews:

"The following sections of the eligibility rules in force at Harvard, Yale and Princeton should be borne in mind by all Harvard undergraduates who plan to take part in athletics during the Summer vacation.

Men who act as counsellors at Summer camps, or play baseball under conditions where there may be a suspicion that some of the players are receiving money or its equivalent should first consult the chairman of the athletic committee or the graduate treasurer. The rules are as follows:

WARNING TO ATHLETES.

"No man who has ever received any pecuniary reward or its equivalent by reason of his connection with athletics, whether for playing, coaching or acting as a teacher in any branch of sport or engaging therein in any capacity, shall represent his university in any athletic team or crew, except that any university committee on eligibility may, subject to the approval of the committee of three chairmen, permit any such participation in intercollegiate athletics by men who might technically be debarred under the letter of the rule, but who, in the judgment of the university committee on eligibility have not commercialized their athletic ability nor offended against the spirit of the foregoing provision.

"No student shall represent his university on any athletic team or crew who receives from others than those on whom he is naturally dependent for financial support money of the equivalent of money, such as board, lodging, etc., unless the source and character of these gifts shall be approved by the eligibility committee, subject to the approval of the three chairmen, on the ground that they have not accrued to him primarily because of his ability as an athlete.

VACATION SPORTS.

"Cases are to be submitted in advance to the university committee on eligibility.

A student who takes part in Summer baseball or camps, for example, without first securing the approval of this committee for his plans, jeopardizes his right thereafter to represent his university in any team or crew.

"The committee shall have power, however, to grant permission in advance to a student to engage in athletics, whether during term time or vacation, as the representative of an organization not connected with the university, under such conditions not at variance with the spirit of the rule, as it may approve.

It may also decide cases involving unintentional technical or trivial violations of the foregoing rules, which are intended to prevent discrimination either in favor of or against a student because he is an athlete."

Revere Tigers After Games

The Revere Tigers with a record of seven victories out of eight games have an open date for Saturday and are out with a challenge to meet any fast amateur team in the state at home. With a second string pitcher they beat the fast Pulaski of Beachmont. Attention!—Cosmopolitans of Cambridge or the Non Cums of Lynn. Apply Manager Joseph Biddle, 65 Adella street, Oak Island, Revere. Telephone 1037-J.

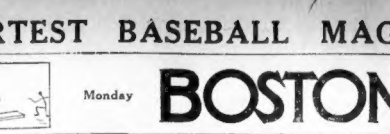
Baseball News and Notes

George Sisler won a game all by himself yesterday, beating Walter Johnson and the Senators, 3 to 1. His double in the second led up to one run, and his single in the ninth knocked off the winning counter. The great Walter was hit safely but six times.

Leon Ames finally pitched a full game, and beat the Phillies, 6 to 2. It was the third straight for the Cardinals, and hauled them out of last place for the time being.

Those Yanks, who have struck their gait again, beat the White Sox and pulled them back to within a single game of the Indians. Shawkey won his fifth straight for the New Yorkers, and held the invaders to one hit, a single, by Fitcher Faber.

Guy Norton helped his own and the Cleveland cause with a single to center in the ninth, that pried loose a run and gave the Indians a 2 to 1 victory over the Athletics.



GOLFERS are getting brazen again since the non-essential industry curfew has been flattened.

WITH all the glue parlors out, we'll have to read the papers to see who cops the Toledo skirmish.

WELL, as Tommy Lipton chirped, anybody can be a good loser with enough practice.

RED SOX-TIGERS FINAL CLASH CALLED OFF

Rain and Cold Put Crimp in Plans of Rival Managers for Game

Ed Sah Hughes Jennings and his scrappy Tigers were forced to take a day off today as the final game of the series with the Red Sox was called off on account of the rain and cold.

The fourth-place Tigers are only six games away from the front as things stand now and the Sox are just a half a game further back, and both managers were disappointed at the postponement.

The Tigers have edged back into the first division, as they managed to win a game in Washington yesterday while the local contenders were trying to keep warm alongside such fireless as they found.

Further, the Sox are sure that they are off on a victory winning streak while the Tigers believe they had the two initial games taken away through hard luck, and that the real class of the teams showed in Saturday's melee.

The Tigers have about the best all-round team they have shown in half a dozen years, and the Sox are as fast a defensive organization as ever.

Up to the moment of hurdling to press no removal of the suspension that weighs down Bush, Young and Manager Jennings had been received from headquarters. Manager Hughey met and swapped handshakes with President Ban Johnson yesterday, but didn't get absolution from sitting in the stands.

President Johnson was here to officiate at the unveiling of the Murnane memorial tablet in the Old Calvary cemetery. The league boss went back to Chicago last night, but admitted before leaving that there was sure to be a change in the division of the World's series receipts next Fall. Indications, he said, pointed to a division of the players' share among the first and second place clubs, and not between the first division athletes, as was the case last year, and the cause of the famous strike.

He also admitted that the American league was off to one of the most prosperous starts in history, and that fans throughout the circuit were turning out in unprecedented numbers to welcome back real big league baseball.

SCHOOLBOY SPORTS

Newton High, with only three games to play and a two-game lead, will be the champion of the suburban league title season. Captain Fred Sawyer, their pitching star, is greatly responsible for their win.

Medford High got a firm grip on second place by defeating Everett, with whom it was tied. The game was a great batting contest, ending with the score 11 to 9.

The championship of Cambridge goes to the Cambridge Latin School by virtue of its victory over Rindge Tech. Rindge won the first of the three-game series and the Latin School took the next two.

Jack McDonald isn't doing a thing but collect championships with his teams at Watertown. The Mystic Valley championship is at Watertown for the second consecutive year. Football and baseball championship teams have also been developed in the few years that Jack has been at Watertown.

Arthur Farley, one of the best all-round athletes that has been at Huntington School for many years, has been elected captain of the track team for next year.

Jim Prior not only pitched his team to victory over Everett, but he also came through at the bat with four hits. His brother John was his battery mate, as Jack Gillis was not in the game.

Clarence Parker's appointment as coach at Exeter next year was well merited. He can keep up the winning teams there if anyone can.

BARGAIN BIKE CARD RACES FOR WEDNESDAY

Manager Butler of the Revere cycle track has started his season in old-time form with a postponement right off the reel.

An army of fans were disappointed Saturday evening, as a bargain day card had been arranged, including two motor-paced races, a junior and a senior event, and in order to give the boys a run for their money the same card will be staged on Wednesday evening. The mid-week program had been laid out, but the demand to see the kid motor-pace followers in action was so great that the manager decided to stage the Saturday night card in full.

Wills Boxes John Lester

New York, June 9.—Harry Wills, New Orleans colored heavyweight, has been matched to meet John Lester Johnson at the Amory A. A. of Jersey City next Monday night.

Eagan Is Coming Home

Joe Eagan, Dorchester middleweight, who was stopped by Jack Malone at Milwaukee, is expected to start for home in a few days. He will then seek bouts with the local 158-165 pounders.

GEORGE DOWD,

BATCHELDER OF HARVARD CREW INJURED

Harvard Training Headquarters, Red Top, Ct., June 9.—Study, reading and long walks was the order of the Harvard crews on their first Sunday in Red Top, on account of a cold, raw day, most of the time was spent around the open fireplaces at both quarters.

The first mishap of the season happened when G. L. Batchelder, who was rowing No. 6 in the second varsity shell, injured his knee while playing ball. Although it was badly swollen today, he expects to resume his position in a few days.

For the present his seat will be occupied by Borland, one of the substitutes.

C. C. Cabot and H. Brown, two freshmen substitutes, have arrived.

The yacht "Dorello," owned by G. L. Batchelder, has arrived at the quarters and is at the disposal of the crews.

SPEED KINGS TO MEET ON TURF AT MEDFORD

The three-day meeting for trotters and pacers at Combination Park, Medford, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will usher in what promises to be the most successful season that the devotees of the light harness sport have had in years.

Although not officially listed as a "Short Ship Meet" this brings together for competition racers that will follow the S. S. circuit program for the next four months. The quality of the entrants in most of the classes leaves nothing to be desired.

The gates will be thrown open Wednesday, when with good weather and track permitting, three races will be served out to followers of the Equine Speedster.

Thursday and Friday's program will also consist of "three" classes slated for action each day with the free-for-all as Thursday's feature, and the 2:15 trot Friday's attraction.

The free-for-all has but four carded to fight for premier honors, but they are all fit and ready. They are: Hoaxy Hal, Oro Pino, Ben Earl and May Bird. All four have worked several miles around 2:12 well in hand and are shaped for an excellent contest.

The 2:15 trot also has an attractive field. Viz: Balen, Balmacoun, Silkebell and Patrick Duluth are a quartette of trotters of the class, any which fact should bring a good race.

Secretary W. L. Duntly announces an entry list in the three classes of close to 100. Everything is in apple pie order for Wednesday's opening. There will be a lot of equine faces which will be seen for the first time in these parts, the trotters Davie Delmar, Helen Mortain, Ontoona Stout, Taviston Woodrow Wilson, Edith Cavell, Lucy and The Raider.

Saturday will be devoted to amateur events, which are always productive of a good deal of rivalry. Some of the racers are classy. Billy Jackson, 2:04¼, heads the list. Flashing, Morris Binger, Delagoa's Lucy and Alma are all fit and ready for the word.

The card follows:

WEDNESDAY

ALEX HANDS 9-2 DEFEAT TO BRAVES

Chicago, June 9. Lefty Tyler was Chicago's pitching choice for this day's game against the Braves, which Pittsburgh was hooked to do the shooting for the finish of the race. The Braves were out to even up the series.

Baseball runs in peculiar ways in wonders to perform. Both the Braves and the Cubs blame Umpire Moran for a lot of things that happened plenty day, when the Cubs won 9 to 5.

The judging of the various factions proves that no matter what an umpire does, he is wrong.

To illustrate, in the fourth portion with one out and the Cubs ahead 2 to 1, Killifer hit a blackhorse and he threw to Maranville and he cost to Holke and a double play seemed assured. However, Umpire Moran said Deal was safe at second.

FLACK GETS HOME RUN.

Alexander walked because Northrop couldn't locate the third-base line for three and two. Flack then eased a homer over the right field fence.

Further illustration of how the umpire always is wrong came in the sixth round. Just prior Paskert had been called out sliding into second base, Umpire Moran making the decision.

Powell tried to Paskert to start the Hosting end of the argument. Evans wandered out on the skinned part of the diamond and way between first and second. Paskert, caught napping, fly easily and threw the ball to Merkle and Moran. The umpire shooed Paskert out of the fray, alleging the apple was cast at him. Barber took Paskert's place and drove in another run in the next inning.

There was another incident bordering on violence worthy of recounting in the third portion. Merkle inhabited third base when Hornsby tapped to Deal. He cast to Killifer and Wilson walked into the ball, apparently but subsequently put on the grass. Wilson's strategy got Boston a run and leads Killifer look foolish.

PLAYERS IN WORDY WAR.

The very next inning Killifer and Wilson became involved in a wordy battle and had to be separated by Umpire Rigler.

It was a good game, from a Chicago standpoint—the home club won. Also, it was quite cheering to viewers of Cleveland. Alexander, who was credited with his second victory of the season, this in spite of the fact that he was nicked for a single, a double and a single in the third portion.

The game would be given different but for the decision at second base in the fourth portion. Maybe Moran was right, maybe he wasn't. The popular method of estimation is that the umpire always is wrong.

CHILL FAILS TO STOP GOBS' DIAMOND TILT

Chill blasts which prevailed at Braves Field Sunday did not prevent the staging of one of the two Sunday service baseball encounters scheduled. The army game was called off early, but the game bringing together naval diamond outfits from Headquarters and Boston Section Base was played and witnessed by a very small portion of the usual gathering of Sabbath ball fans. Naval Headquarters triumphed 10 to 9, but only after the issue had gone twelve drawn-out chapters.

WILLARD. WORRIES BACKERS BY REFUSAL TO TRAIN

By FRANK G. MENKE.

TOLEDO, O., June 9.—Those who are vitally interested in the welfare of Jess Willard are urging today with increased vehemence, "Get a trainer—and get him quickly."

But the giant Kansan, who is sole boss of his own training, answers in this fashion: "I'll train according to my own ideas. I know a whole lot more as to what I should and should not do in getting myself ready than anyone else.

"Perhaps my methods are not meeting with unanimous approval of my friends at this time, but I'll promise them that I'll be in the best fighting shape of my career on the fourth."

What Is the Ideal Modern Wife?

MANY an American warrior, who never dreamed, prior to the war, of marrying outside of his native land, has found his ideal of womanhood overseas. Witness the number of brides taken by our service men.

This romance phase of the war has brought to the fore the absorbing question of what is the best kind of a mate for a man.

Has war broadened or in any other way changed the general masculine view toward womanhood. Our young men have acquired a stern realization of life. Will they be more critical in their search for a wife?

Exactly what is the ideal modern wife?

A prize of $25 will be awarded for the letter which, in the opinion of the judges, embodies the clearest and most unbiased answer. For the letter adjudged second best $10 will be awarded, and for the letter adjudged third best $5.

The decisions will be made by Beatrice Fairfax.

Confine your letter to 200 words, write on one side of the paper only and give your name and address. Only initials will be used if you so prefer.

The contest closes Saturday noon, June 14. No letters received after that date will be considered. The announcement of the winners will be made during the week of June 23.

Address letters to Boston American Magazine Page, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

STUDEBAKER IS OFF 9 POINTS AT LOWEST

Sudden Drop in Demand for Stocks on Part of Public

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, reviewing the list as a whole, although gains were above the low-est morning level. The market was irregular at the opening. For the first time in weeks comparatively few bargaining orders were placed over-night. Demand by the public had suddenly slackened. After a few minutes a recessional tendency was evident in most departments. The trend continued downward most of the time during the rest of the morning. But there was a slight hardening of prices in the early hours. Declines ranged from fractions to more than nine points, Studebaker leading in this respect. Among other notably weak issues were: General Motors, Mexican Petroleum, Central Leather, Fleet Sugar, American Smelting, Marine preferred and Atlantic Gulf. Trading was active. Three hour transactions totalling around 420,000 shares.

GAINS AND LOSSES.

U. S. Steel ranged from 105⅛ to 110¼, and by noon was off ⅝ at 110. Studebaker was off 9 at 111⅝, after selling as low as 107½. General Motors was off 8 at 228, after selling at 236. Atlantic Gulf was off 4⅛ at 182⅜, after selling at 179½, and Mexican Petroleum was off ⅝ at 190⅜, after selling at 189.

Gains at noon included Chandler, 6 at 204, its highest record price; International Harvester, 3¼ at 139; Advance Rumely, 3⅜ at 44⅜; Allis Chalmers, 1⅝ at 45⅝; Southern Pacific, ½ at 112⅜; Reading, 1⅛ at 92⅝, and Royal Dutch of New York, 2⅝ at 117⅝.

Railroads improved to the second hour, with Reading in the lead. Coppers ruled lower. American Zinc was strong to New York as well as in Boston, showing a two-point gain in the former market at its highest.

BOSTON MARKET OPENED FIRM.

The Boston market opened firm and was relatively stronger during the morning than New York. Its noon it had weakened somewhat, a majority of active issues showing small losses. It had strong spots, however, throughout the forenoon. Among issues to show from one to more than two points gain at their best were United Fruit, American Zinc, St. Mary's Island, Texas, United Shoe and Quincy. High-priced coppers were strong as a group and also comparatively active.

Among the weakest issues were Warren Brothers common and Massachusetts Gas. The low-priced coppers ruled a little lower. Mayflower-Old Colony had a narrow range and was unsteady.

Active issues included American Zinc, Pond Creek and United Shoe.

BUSINESS GAINS IN MANY LINES

Mills More Active, Copper Firmer and Crop Prospects Continue Good

Business improved last week, and expansion was a little more noticeable than for any similar period perhaps since the first of the year. Demand for many commodities increased, although prices had an upward rather than a downward movement. But consumers generally recognize the improbability of any decline in production costs, and are looking ahead to an era when inflation will be universal and prevail not only in their own particular line, but in every other. This country and the public generally are accustomed to higher prices very quickly. When they obtain matter-of-fact acceptance it will have very little influence upon public welfare. The mental process is the most important phase of the statement. What is needed most of all is to get everybody at work, for industry will provide the money, the food and all the other necessities. One of the most encouraging reports is the decrease in the number of the unemployed. In fact, authorities are now predicting that there will soon be a great labor shortage.

There is more steel mill activity and before the end of the year such plants will have their capacity taxed. There must be a vast amount of building done within a few years and when construction starts there will be a veritable boom in industries that furnish materials. Railroads were never in need of so much equipment as now. This applies to locomotives as well as American roads.

There was better buying of copper last week than for some time and the character of inquiries for red metal indicates that all the largest consumers see normal if not an excessive demand for their own products. What has happened already in the leather and textile trades is going to be repeated in all industries. But for the existing surplus of metal copper would be selling for above its present prices. Even under present conditions producers feel it is worth fully 20 cents a pound today. They are more or less concerned over the prospect that when the present supply is exhausted it will be difficult to obtain enough labor to supply the amount of copper the world will call for.

BANK CLEARINGS TELL OF EXPANDING TRADE

How business has been expanding in this country is told by bank clearings. The net result of banking operations in the United States in May, 1919, according to "Bradstreet's," was $32,925,529, "an excess of $925,000,000, or 2.7 per cent, over January, and to that extent the greatest monthly aggregate in the country's history."

The crop situation continues satisfactory and that is the greatest prosperity factor in this country's immediate future. The present condition of wheat promises the greatest yield ever known, and other grains are also headed toward harvest records. If harvests equal present prospects the United States will have food enough to feed not only itself but all countries which are looking to it as their salvation from famine.

INVEST YOUR MONEY IN A NEW ENGLAND ENTERPRISE

8% CUMULATIVE PREFERRED STOCK
AT THE PAR VALUE OF
$25.00 Per Share

(These shares are callable for redemption after June 30, 1923, at $26.25 and any accrued dividends.)

BONUS: To every purchaser of 6 Shares of the 8 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock, or multiples thereof, will be given free One-Quarter Share of the Common Stock, valued at $25.00. This bonus will apply to the first 12,000 shares only.

FACTS ABOUT THE ATLANTIC MOTOR EXPRESS

ORGANIZED under the laws of State of Maine and capitalized for $750,000.00. It will conduct a general EXPRESS and FREIGHT business throughout NEW ENGLAND, employing a vast fleet of Pierce-Arrow Motor Trucks as the means of transportation. It will give BETTER AND QUICKER SERVICE at lower rates than can be obtained under the present existing conditions. Spacious and centrally located TERMINALS have been acquired at 42-48 Hartford St., Boston, and 72-76 Cross St., PORTLAND. With the new $250,000.00 equipment the ATLANTIC MOTOR EXPRESS is prepared to do a business of $1,250,000.00 a year. Nearly one-half of this is acquired by the consolidation. The net profits will amount to approximately 15 per cent. of the invested capital. Branch Offices will be opened the first year in 100 cities and towns throughout New England, 35 being already established.

THE MANAGEMENT

The ATLANTIC MOTOR EXPRESS is conceded to have one of the best sets of Administrative Officials in New England, everyone being a bona-fide cash investor, and a diligent worker for its success. They are as follows:

President and General Manager: LINWOOD E. PORTER of Portland, Me.' Mr. Porter is well known as the successful manager of the Atlantic Express, and is considered an expert in traffic matters.

Vice-President: FRANK A. RUMERY of Portland, Me. Mr. Rumery is the head of the F. A. Rumery Co., Contractors and Builders, also the Russell Ship Bldg. Co., and a director of the Forest City Trust Co.

Secretary: GEORGE A. HENDRICKS of Boston, Mass. Mr. Hendricks is the proprietor of the Kingston Press, and also the Dover Bindery, besides being secretary of many lodges.

Treasurer: FRED A. NICKERSON of Portland, Me. Mr. Nickerson was one of the most successful production engineers for the Pierce-Arrow Motor Co., and is their present agent for Maine.

Clerk: ERNEST E. NOBLE. Mr. Noble is one of the ablest corporation lawyers in New England.

Boston Terminal Manager: EDWARD C. WALKER. Mr. Walker is the present local manager for the Atlantic Express, and is well known as the president of the Expressman's League.

The above men will constitute a Board of Directors that will serve as a safeguard for your investment.

ATLANTIC MOTOR EXPRESS TO COVER BIG FIELD

As an accessory to New England's transportation service, the management of the Atlantic Motor Express believes it will be a great business aid. Their aim is to "deliver the goods" to patrons and investors. The new corporation will be a consolidation of the Atlantic Express, now in operation, and the proposed Boston, Portland and Waterville Motor Express. It will conduct a general express and freight business throughout New England by means of a large "fleet" of Pierce-Arrow motor trucks. Its terminals will include quarters at Nos. 42 to 48 Hartford street, Boston, and Nos. 72 to 76 Cross street, Portland; and it proposes to have 100 branch offices in New England within a year, thirty-five having been established already. Among the management's expectations the following are quoted:

"It will give better and quicker service at lower rates than can be obtained under present conditions.

"With the new $250,000 equipment the Atlantic Motor Express is prepared to do a business of $1,250,000 a year.

"The net profits will amount to approximately 15 per cent. of the invested capital."

The Atlantic Motor Express is offering to the investing public 27,000 shares of 8 per cent. cumulative preferred stock at the par value of $25 a share, and in this connection the management states: "To every purchaser of six shares of the 8 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, or multiples thereof, will be given free one-quarter shares of the common stock valued at $25. This bonus will apply to the first 12,000 shares only."

Boston Wool Shipments

From January 1 to June 5 this year inclusive shipments of wool from Boston, according to the Commercial Bulletin, totalled 58,695,237 pounds, against 88,254,733 pounds for the same period last year. The receipts from January 1, 1919, to June 5, 1919, inclusive, were 127,568,931 pounds against 190,373,736 pounds for the same period last year.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN JUNE 9, 1919. BOSTON.

Public Evils Invite Violent Remedies if Long Tolerated

The President in his message to Congress, discussing the return of the telephone and telegraph lines to private management, says:

Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest that in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of the railways, it is clearly desirable, in the public interest, that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities a uniform and coordinated system which will afford those who use them as complete and certain means of communication as has so long been afforded by the postal system and at rates as uniform and intelligible.

Expert advice is, of course, available in this very practical matter. Neither the telegraph nor the telephone service of the country can be said to be in any sense a national system. There are many confusions and inconsistencies of rates. The scientific means by which communication by such instrumentalities could be rendered more thorough and satisfactory has not been made full use of.

The central authority of the nation can be used to unify and improve it, if undertaken by the appropriate committees of the Congress. This would result indirectly, even if not directly, in a great public benefit.

Why is it that the United States Government is able to handle the mails so well that no one has ever suggested that the mail service should be taken away from public control and entrusted to private enterprise?

Why is it that the present operation of the railroads and of the telephones, under Government auspices, is so much criticised when the management of the railroads and the telephones is still in the hands of the railroad and the telephone men who previously operated those systems?

In not a single instance has any railroad or any telephone system been taken out of the hands of the managers, superintendents and operatives who previously handled them.

If the Government can handle the mails successfully when they are entrusted solely to officials and employes selected and trained by the Government, why cannot the Government select and train men to operate successfully the railroads, the telegraphs and the telephones?

Why is it that in every city or community where a public utility has been operated in competition with a utility under private management, the public owned utility has always lowered prices and forced the privately owned utility companies to render better service and at lower prices?

American telephone managers and American railroad operators are admittedly the most skillful in the world. All the higher officials of both systems and all their financial backers WANT PUBLIC OWNERSHIP TO FAIL, and many of them are, consciously or unconsciously, doing their best to make Government ownership fail. They all owe allegiance to private ownership.

Every one knows that the Government has not removed a single manager or superintendent or employe of the telephone service in New York since the Government took nominal control of the telephone service. Yet EVERYBODY knows that the telephone service has gone all to pieces.

The Government is blamed, although the Government has had nothing to do with the failure. The Government is only the excuse for the deterioration of service under the direct management and supervision of the SAME OFFICIALS who formerly conducted the service successfully.

Another matter of the gravest importance at this time is the studied effort of private directors of railroads to mislead the public as to what is being done with the railroads under so-called Government control.

Statements have been made repeatedly that a deficit of about a billion dollars has been created in the guaranteed net operating revenue of the railroads, and solely from two causes: First, the incompetence of the Government as a railroad operator, and, second, the enormous increases of wages of railroad employes by the Government.

The fact is that not a single great railroad system in the United States is operated by any officials except the trained employes and high officials who formerly operated railroads under private ownership.

By far the greater part of the increase in operating expenses is due, not to increase in transportation expenses, but to increase in upkeep of roadbed and equipment.

The figures, furnished by the railroads themselves to the Interstate Commerce Commission, published last week, show that in the first three months of 1919 maintenance appropriations for upkeep of roadbed and equipment amounted to $457,000,000. In the corresponding three months of 1917, when the railroads were paying their bills out of their own pockets, and had no Government guarantee of dividends and profits, the railroad managers spent for upkeep of roadbed and equipment $256,000,000.

Here is an INCREASE of $201,000,000 in three months, spent to improve the railroads while they are nominally under Government control. That vast sum—at the rate of $800,000,000 a year—will be appropriated by Congress and paid out of the public treasury.

The expenditures for the rehabilitation of the railroads are being made at public expense by the very practical, able and alert railroad officials, for the benefit of their own roads, in the interest of PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

If the railroads are to be rebuilt or refitted at public expense, why should they not be owned by the public?

To believe that the American people will consent to the definite continuance of the private management of the great public functions like the management of the railroads, telephone and telegraph companies, the street railways and the gas and electric light companies, is to imagine that the people of the United States have abandoned all thought of progress.

This is not the characteristic of the American people. It is true that we are more impatient of half tolerable evils than perhaps any other intelligent free nation of the world. But we are less tolerant than any other nation of WHOLLY INTOLERABLE evils. We move very fast when we do move, and those who have, in our past, uncompromisingly clung to an evil, presuming upon American patience, have lived to regret it.

Our Revolutionary forefathers lost patience with the Tories and swept away their property and swept them out of the country. We swept away slavery WITHOUT COMPENSATION TO THE SLAVEHOLDERS for what our Supreme Court acknowledged to be property. That was confiscation of private property amounting to three billions dollars, and no one suggested paying for it.

We are now about to sweep away the liquor traffic without compensation to those who have property in it; although we have recognized the legitimacy of the property and collected millions of dollars of taxes upon it.

Let the real owners of the public utilities, the real investors, the men who put their honest money into the enterprise, beware whither they are being led by those who want the return of the old private management of the railroads in order to make these properties once more the instruments of stock gambling and exploitation.

Let the real owners—the railroad stock and bond holders—remember that it is a game in which the speculators and their attorneys cannot lose.

JABBERGOLFY

'Twas baffy in the dormy bone
And foursome was the niblic bye,
All birdie was the putter sclaff
The gobbis bisque to lie.
Full bogey were the Brae-Burn links,
The stance was stymie in the whins,
The golfiac was dead at par,
A-hanging for his sins.

They're off on the Brae-Burn Country Club's course at West Newton for the open championship title. They talk a language all their own. Do you understand all those golf terms? Neither do we.

EVERYBODY HAPPY

Congratulations nation-wide for gallant Sergeant York and bride.
He slew the Germans by the score, then, like young Twist, he called for "More."
It was not in his conscience plan to decimate his fellow-man,
But when his country said he should, he did the level best he could.
That he came home all safe and sound is cause for joy the land around,
And Germany is satisfied to look him to his loving bride.
This one-man army that we sent from sunny Tennessee.

THOSE GEORGETTE CREPES

"The predominant characteristic of woman is to choose the invisible rather than the material." So said Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York in his commencement address at Northfield Seminary. Of course, Dr. Speer was referring to woman's general attitude toward life. But he might have been speaking of her choice of clothing, the "material" of it nowadays being of low visibility.

STREET CARS TEACH THE LAWS OF MOTION

By Garrett P. Serviss

"What is the proper position for a passenger in a fast-moving train if he is to maintain his equilibrium without holding on to the strap? I notice that it is necessary to curtail your step while making for the exit as the train slows up, and I have seen a man pushed forward with such force as the train stopped that he lost his footing. Why is it risky to alight with your left foot first?—M. S."

A STREET or subway car is a perfect "laboratory" for the study of the laws of motion. They might all have been found out by an observant and thoughtful straphanger if Sir Isaac Newton had not saved him the trouble. In a car the human body becomes the subject of involuntary experimentation of the most varied kind. It may take away some of the discomforts of strap-hanging to concentrate the mind on the scientific lessons that are being taught.

Proper consideration of the three great laws of motion will tell you exactly what you ought to do in order to "maintain your equilibrium" and save yourself from disaster in all circumstances connected with street-car travel. You might with advantage pass these laws in your hat and keep watch for the practical demonstrations of their inviolability which are sure to be forced upon your attention as the car goes merrily on its way, sporting with you like a juggler with his ball.

First Law of Motion

See, for instance, how splendidly you illustrate, as you grip your strap and wait for the car to start, the first law of motion, which says that every body perseveres in its state of rest or of uniform motion in a straight line except when it is compelled by force to change that state. This is sometimes called the law of inertia, inertia being the word used to describe the inability of bodies of all kinds to begin moving or to stop moving of their own accord.

Before the car starts you stand upright with nothing to interfere with your position of verticality. Suddenly the driver puts on the power, and as the car starts forward your body tips backward. Its state of rest has been interfered with by a force directed forward. You feel the shock of the change throughout your body, but the friction of your feet pressing upon the floor holds the lower part of your body, and forces it forward while the upper part is flung backward because, on account of inertia, it requires a little time to take up the full motion. You counteract this backward swing by hanging on to the strap. If a pillar of wood of your height and weight were firmly fastened to the floor it would not actually tip backward, as you do, because of its rigidity, but there would be the same tendency to tip backward, and if the start were sudden and violent enough the upper part of the pillar would be snapped off.

Second and Third Laws

The second law of motion says that change of motion is proportional to the force applied and takes place in the direction in which the force acts. The truth of that you will observe every time some unexpected motion of the car throws you this way or that. But you must remember that the upper part of your body will always sway in a direction opposite to that in which the disturbing force acts. It is your feet, which are fastened to the floor by friction, that move immediately in the direction of the force.

The third law is that to every action of force there is always an equal and contrary reaction. You will become vividly conscious of the exactness of this law when you are pitched with your nose against a door jamb or a window casing. If you weigh 150 pounds and are projected against the end of the car with a speed of fifteen feet per second, or a little over ten miles an hour, the force of the blow or the momentum will be 2,250 foot-pounds, and since the wall will strike back with that same force, your body will have to dispose of that amount of momentum.

Keeping the three laws in mind and observing their practical applications, you have a complete vade mecum of the straphanger's natural philosophy.

PEOPLE WHO USE ENERGY TILTING AT WINDMILLS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

LIKE Don Quixote, most of us spend a lot of time and energy in tilting at windmills.

There is nothing whatever the matter with the windmills. They are perfectly good, steady going, useful features of the landscape; but we imagine them to be something else.

To our alarmed eyes they appear to be terrible obstacles to our progress, and we rush against them full tilt, thereby doing no harm to anyone but ourselves.

Here is a letter from a girl who is fighting against what seems to her an impossible strong windmill.

"Dear Mrs. Woodrow: Here is a pretty hopeless case. Me—egotistic, selfish, disagreeable, mean little me! And I have a quick, nasty temper, too. So I am writing you, who solve so many problems, to ask if there is any hope.

"What is a girl with so horrid a nature to do? I've tried ever so many times, and I've resolved time and again to refrain from hurting those who love me; but I'm horrid—that's just it, and I don't seem able to change.

"Older people say I am spoiled. Maybe I am, but really I don't like I be. I would much rather say nice things, but the sarcastic, cutting ones always come to my lips, and when I lose my temper I don't know what I am saying.

"Now admit it: am I not hopeless? Or will you encourage me by saying that perhaps I am not all sour, and that there is a vestige of sugar left in my composition? Or, still better, you may be able to suggest some magic that will work the desired change.

"I know this sounds like a lot of nonsense, but the idea of being so disagreeable to others as well as myself is making me very unhappy.

"Won't you please write an article telling how to conquer the bad traits in one's character? I am sure it will be appreciated by many."

Use Common Sense

Dear girl, I am at present out of my stock of magic, and all I can offer you is a little commonsense of the plain, everyday variety, but warranted to wear better than magic.

Instead of nursing and coddling those faults of yours and watching them continually to see how fast they grow, suppose you treat them to a little wholesome neglect. The minute you begin to watch yourself and try your best to curb your cutting remarks, you will hear yourself uttering a stream of them. Don't take them so seriously.

Take your attention off them for a season and consider instead their very nice reverse sides.

The reverse side of sarcasm is wit and nimbleness of mind. The reverse side of a quick temper is often generosity and that valuable quality known as "pep." Get a truer perspective on yourself. The world takes us at our own valuation, and your valuation of yourself is enough to make anyone who enjoys good company—and who does not?—shrink from you.

It is part of your business in life to be so disciplined and cultivated that you are charming and gracious, but not too sweet. The too sweet person is like fish without lemon, or apple pie without cheese, or ham without mustard.

Find Your Strong Points

Turn around and make that energy constructive. There must be something which you would like especially to do. You may have some real gift which is begging for expression, or you may have a head for business. I, of course, do not know. It is up to you to discover the thing at which you believe you could excel and then absorb yourself in it. Instead of analyzing and dissecting your thoughts, lose yourself in something that absorbs all your attention, and you will find that in your hours of recreation you will be gay and glad, instead of sour and sad as you are at present.

The old habits of speech will hang on for a while, but if you don't notice them they will gradually cease. And even if you do hurt someone's feelings now and then, do not agonize over it. Most people are perfectly well able to take care of themselves in a verbal encounter; and they shouldn't be so sensitive anyway.
